30% ICBC rate hike looms

Cost of auto accidents soaring

Premium hikes of at least 20 per cent lie ahead next year for B.C. motorists if accidents continue at their present rate, the president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. warned Thursday.

And Tom Holmes admitted the increases could go as high as 30 per cent if the accident trend worsens.

The grim predictions came as the ICBC revealed it lost $15.5 million on Autoplan in the first six months of this year.

Holmes said he views the increase in frequency and severity of claims with grave concern.

He said accident claims now are costing the corporation and B.C. motorists $1.2 million a day.

"We're concerned about future premium rates and all drivers should share this concern and exercise greater care on the roads," he said.

The reversal from last year, when the corporation earned $1.09 million, is due to increased accidents and spiraling costs of vehicle repairs, ICBC said.

The cost of claims jumped $40 million, or 22 per cent, to $218 million from $178 million last year.

Of that $40 million, $25 million resulted from increased severity in accident claims and $15 million related to the increase in the number of claims.

ICBC received 246,000 claims in the period, 19,000 more than last year, and the average claim was $886, an increase of $102 or 13 per cent from 1979.

The average bodily injury claim increased 10 per cent to $4,021, or $355 a claim more than last year.

Holmes said ICBC is attempting to offset the claims impact by increasing its efficiency. Operating expenses dropped 8.4 per cent and the corporation's expense ratio was 16.7 per cent of the premium dollars earned, down from 17.1 per cent in 1979.

"This is a significant achievement and compares very favorably with the North American industry average of over 30 per cent," said Holmes.

The corporation's investment strategy also is helping to offset claims, he said.

In the first six months, investment income climbed to $37 million from $28.4 million for the same period last year, an increase of 29 per cent.

The general insurance division had a surplus of $1.2 million compared to $1 million a year ago.

Brewery union pickets move at court order

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the brewery workers union obeyed a B.C. Supreme Court order today and removed a picket line in front of the provincial liquor distribution branch warehouse in east Vancouver.

The move followed threats by the branch to launch contempt of court proceedings against the union, which earlier defied a Supreme Court order to stop picketing the branch's warehouse.

Branch lawyers also threatened to sue the union for damages because of what the branch claimed, were substantial additional costs from the pickets.

Members of the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union were served with a court order Thursday demanding they stop picketing the branch warehouse where an estimated 100,000 dozen bottles of imported beer are being stored pending delivery to liquor stores.

The brew was expected to leave the warehouse for Greater Vancouver area liquor stores as soon as pickets left, a warehouse official said today.

B.C. Labor Relations Board filed a cease-and-desist order with the court after the pickets, who set up the line last Friday, continued to disobey the branch's order, issued Tuesday following hearings.

Board chairman Don Munroe said he had no alternative but to seek court help in view of the union's defiance, which he said was "doing great damage to the reputation of the trade union movement."

About 900 union members have been locked out at three major B.C. breweries for more than four weeks in a dispute over a new collective agreement.

The branch has brought in increased amounts of imported beer to meet public demand. The increase brought union charges that the branch is acting as ally to the breweries — Carling-O'Keefe, Labatts and Molsons — and therefore open to picket action.

The breweries have offered the union members a $1-an-hour wage increase in each year of a three-year pact, while the union has been demanding a $1.05-an-hour increase in each year of a two-year contract.

3 Cubans wounded as jet seized in Peru

LIMA (AP) — About 170 Cubans, many of them children, seeking to go to the United States seized a Los Angeles-bound Braniff jetliner on the ground in this Peruvian capital today, taking 14 people hostage, a Braniff spokesman said.

Three of the Cubans were injured by gunshots apparently fired by Peruvian police, authorities said. Witnesses said several other refugees were cut by glass after breaking windows of the terminal building to get onto the runway.

The group was part of some 400 Cubans who surged onto the runway as the plane was being prepared for boarding for a continuation of a flight from Rio de Janeiro to Los Angeles. Police jerked the ramp from the DC-8 jet to prevent more Cubans from boarding, witnesses said.

"What we want is to join our families in the United States" said Manuel Vega, a Cuban who could not get on the plane.

Braniff's manager in Lima, Leopoldo Pflucker, said: "It will all be settled soon. It's just a matter of time."

He said the hostages are believed to be 11 regular passengers and three flight attendants. Most of the flight crew was on the ground when the plane was seized, he said. Sixty-five of the Cubans are children, he added.

Associated Press correspondent Harold Olmos, who managed to climb the ramp and talk with one of the Cubans, said the situation now appears calm.

The press attache at the U.S. embassy said U.S. Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman is at the airport and in touch with Peruvian officials handling the negotiations, but he was not involved directly in the talks aboard the plane.

The embassy spokesman said the Cubans' only demand is to go to the United States.

Flight 920 was making a fuelling stopover in Lima and had been scheduled to depart for Los Angeles at 1:20 a.m. EDT, a Braniff spokesman said.

As of Tuesday subscribers to the evening edition of the Times-Colonist will also be eligible for prizes in the King Fisherman Contest, including the CP Air trip for two to Sydney, Australia, with $500 expense money.

There are 200 weigh-in stations on Vancouver Island ready to accept entries, which means that wherever you fish on Vancouver Island or the Gulf Islands there is a handy place to enter.

Evening edition subscibers must now make sure they tick the box on the entry form which asks: Are you a subscriber?

Tyee are classed as chinooks 30 pounds and heavier caught north of Nile Creek or in Alberni Inlet-Barkley Sound and north. To qualify freshwater fish must be one pound or heavier and salmon five pounds or heavier.

Pierre's RSVP protocol spat

OTTAWA (CP) — A protocol spat between Alberta and Ottawa could force cancellation of Prime Minister Trudeau's participation in the province's gala 75th anniversary celebrations Monday.

Sources say Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed snubbed Trudeau by refusing to allow the prime minister to be included in the official party at a splashy ceremony on the lawn of the provincial legislature Monday.

The ceremony involves Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer, Lougheed, Alberta Lt.-Gov. Frank Lynch-Staunton and the Lord Mayor of London, Peter Gadsden, a native of the province.

The sources say that Alberta informally sought an indication from Trudeau early this summer on whether he would attend. When Trudeau confirmed a little more than two weeks ago that he would take part, he was told it was too late and the programs had already been printed.

Trudeau has instead been offered an invitation to a luncheon being thrown by Lougheed later in the day.

A spokesman in Trudeau's office would not comment on the spat other than to say the invitation to the luncheon has not yet been accepted.

Trudeau will participate in the official ceremonies for Saskatchewan's 75th anniversary celebrations in Regina three days later on Sept. 4.

Saskatchewan issued in invitation in May and Trudeau accepted it at the same time he confirmed he would attend the Alberta event.

Radiation exposure oversight

MACKENZIE (CP) — An oversight in construction of a dental clinic here exposed dentists and dental staff to x-ray radiation for six years, a local official said Thursday.

District administrator Vern Ciccone said the building was designed in 1974 according to specifications of the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons "which for some reason did not include the lead shielding protection."

He said council first heard of the engineering omission in 1977 after a labor ministry building inspection.

"We nearly dropped dead when we got the inspector's report but after that there was an administration change and the notice to change the building got lost in the shuffle," Ciccone said.

He said further delays occurred when council could not find a contractor to make the necessary changes.

"We required special technicians to install some sort of shielding and it was too difficult to find someone," the administrator said.

An estimated $30,000 to $40,000 will be spent to line the walls and floors of two partitions in the clinic.

$400 state grant: I'll be doggoned

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — An Eagle River man has received a state grant of $400 to develop a dog-powered washing machine.

The grant to Bill Hall was among $120,000 awarded to 44 Alaskans this week to encourage the development of innovative energy technologies and renewable resources.

Hall's proposal calls for an exercise wheel to be used to harness the dogs for working the washing machine. The method is to be demonstrated by Hall, a computer specialist, at local dog mushing club meetings.

Hall's somewhat primitive mode of washing clothes involves a wheel and pulley system, two 55-gallon drums and modified toilet plungers.

Poland's crisis intensifies

GDANSK (AP) — The Polish labor crisis intensified today as talks aimed at ending the 15-day-old strikes stalled with both sides appearing unwilling to budge on the worker's key demand — trade unions free of government control.

Sources on the workers' strike committee said the number of strikebound enterprises in the tri-city region around Gdansk has swelled to 627, well above the 480 figure which the strikers claimed three days ago.

One strike committee member claimed workers in the vital coal and steel centres in Silesia have threatened to strike in support of the Gdansk workers if the government does not meet the trade union demand by Monday, the unofficial end of a "cooling off" period proposed by strike leader Leszek Walesa on Thursday.

In West Berlin, the Working Group for Human Rights claimed today several hundred ethnic Poles in the East German port of Rostock called in "sick" in a "solidarity action" with the workers across the border in Poland. The West German group had no information that other East German workers had joined them and the report could not be independently confirmed.

Hours after strike leaders in Gdansk called off scheduled talks with the government Thursday night, the government negotiators postponed a fourth face-to-face bargaining session scheduled for today, saying without explanation that they were "not yet ready" to meet the Baltic area strike leaders.

Sources on the Joint Strike Committee, which represents an estimated 300,000 workers on Poland's industrial north coast, said the talks, tentatively set for midday, might resume later today. It was not known if the government's postponement would cancel the later meeting.

The sources said they would press the chief government negotiator, First Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, for a "direct answer" on their demand for free trade unions, the main stumbling block in a settlement of the strike.

Word of the government's postponement came amid growing signs that the strikers are losing patience with what they consider government stalling on the trade union issue.

The claim that miners and steelworkers in the southwestern area might join the walkout could have far-reaching consequences for embattled Communist party leader Edward Gierek. The district is regarded as Gierek's main power base and the coal mines and steel mills have been relatively free of labor unrest.

Poland's labor turmoil began July 1 when the government halted meat-price subsidies, sending prices skyrocketing.

The strikers' initial complaints were economic, but as the strikes expanded so did their demands, which now include calls for freedom of the press, freedom for political prisoners and free trade unions.

In Edmonton, meanwhile, about 1,000 people, many holding placards and singing Polish songs, held a downtown rally in support of the striking workers in Poland.

Recession worse in second quarter

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's economic recession worsened in the second quarter of the year with a 1.1-per cent decline from the first quarter in the volume of goods and services produced, Statistics Canada reported today.

The second-quarter decline to $128.3 billion from $129.7 billion in the first three months of the year excludes the effect of inflation. It is the worst quarterly performance since 1962 and means that the recession is more severe than the one in 1974-75, the agency said.

At annual rates, the quarterly figure implies a 4.4-per-cent real decline this year in production of goods and services, also known as gross national product.

Statistics Canada warns such a figure is misleading. Even so, most forecasters expect a decline of up to one per cent in production, the worst in 26 years.

In the first six months of the year, the agency says production dropped 1.7 per cent from the same period of 1979, largely because of more weakness in consumer demand.

Continued rapid inflation in the price of consumer goods and services and record-high interest rates caused a 0.7 per cent drop in personal spending in the second quarter as purchases of durable goods — such as cars and appliances — declined 5.6 per cent.

Business spending dropped 2.5 per cent in the second quarter as residential construction declined by 10.5 per cent.

Genocide of 20,000 evidenced

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Tass news agency reported Thursday that 20,000 bodies were found in a mountain gorge in eastern Cambodia, apparently victims of the ousted Khmer Rouge regime's alleged campaign of genocide against minorities.

In a dispatch from Phnom Penh, Tass said the victims all were members of the Cham nationality and apparently had been trussed and thrown alive into Chrosstungtrong Gorge in the mountains of northern Kompongcham Province.

The Soviet Union supports the new Cambodian government installed by Vietnam in 1978. The Khmer Rouge, supported by China, have been fighting a guerrilla war against the Vietnamese-backed regime since their ouster.

Of tens of thousands of Cham nationals who previously lived in the province's Kampongsiem and Kongmias districts, Tass said there were only four survivors when invading Vietnamese forces overthrew the regime of Pol Pot in 1978.

Air lines seek fare hikes

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Air and Air Canada have applied to the Canadian Transport Commission for permission to increase domestic air fares by about seven per cent Oct. 14.

The two major airlines said Thursday they need higher prices to cover rising fuel and general operating costs.

CP Air specifically cited the $2-a-barrel increase in the price of Canadian oil in August and a government-imposed increase of 15 per cent in domestic landing fees and general terminal fees.

Air Canada said the proposed increases would bring it about $60 million more in 1981 but expects its expenses to rise by $130 million, mostly because of higher fuel prices.

The requested increases vary on different routes from 6.8 per cent to 7.2 per cent.

Air Canada also wants its fares to U.S. points to rise an average of nine per cent, while fares to Europe would go up three per cent and fares to the Caribbean eight per cent.

CP Air said it wants to increase prices for its no-frills SkyBus flights by about 10 per cent.

The last major increase in the price of tickets at both airlines was in March when, again because of increased fuel and operating costs, prices rose an average 9.5 per cent.

Several smaller increases this year have added a dollar or two to the price of tickets.

Convicted H-trafficker escapes prison

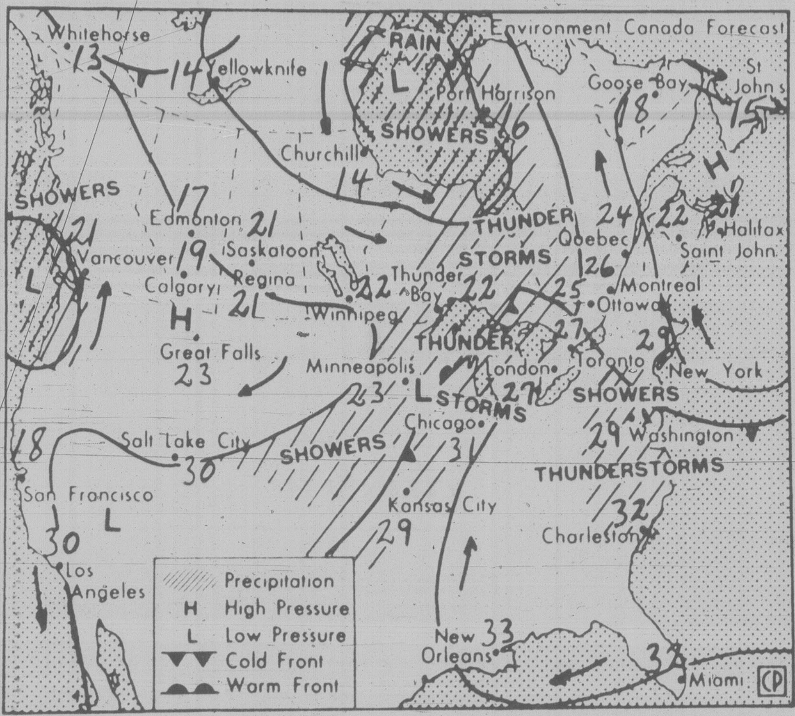
MATSQUI (CP) — A manhunt is under way for convicted heroin trafficker Douglas Garnet Palmer, who escaped Thursday from medium-security Matsqui institution in this Fraser Valley municipality.

Palmer, 40, was serving life following his March, 1976 conviction for conspiring to traffic in heroin.

RCMP said it's not clear how Palmer escaped.

His twin brother, Donald, was also sentenced to life in prison and is still behind bars. Five other associates received jail terms ranging from five to 20 years.

Another brother, Raymond, escaped from the old B.C. Penitentiary in 1970 and managed to elude police for two years. He was arrested in Australia where he had assumed a new identity as a roofing contractor. He was extradited to Canada to to finish a six-year term for possession of stolen bonds.



Map valid noon Saturday

The system will gradually weaken as it continues southeastward but it will carry enough moisture to release a few showers over southern B.C. tonight and on Saturday. Gradual drying will take place later on Saturday as a weak ridge of high pressure rebuilds along the coast.

Fishboats freighters tangle

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Coast Guard has placed buoys near the mouth of the Capilano River to mark the shipping lane in an effort to keep sport fishing boats out of the way of large ocean-going vessels.

There have been a number of incidents recently where small craft have nearly been swamped or run over and large vessels nearly grounded while trying to avoid them, said Fred Moxey, a seaman with the coast guard.

"I've seen them out there still fishing when a huge freighter is bearing down on them," he said. "Maybe they've got a big one on the line or something, I don't know."

The situation is particularly bad near the river mouth where salmon fishermen are congregating, said Moxey.

Vancouver police are patrolling the area and have the authority to lay charges against boat operators found to be contravening the law, he said.

Small craft are not permitted to linger in the traffic lane or get in the way of large vessels, but the lane has never been marked before.

Moxey said there have been reports of freighters being forced to reverse their engines to avoid collisions and recently the ferry Princess of Vancouver had to come hard over to miss a small boat.

Doctor backs union claim: farm living conditions poor

The Canadian Press

Itinerant farmworkers commonly live in unsafe and unsanitary conditions are farms throughout the Fraser Valley, a health ministry study shows.

However, Dr. Gerald Bonham, ministry spokesman, said Thursday the ministry does not want to punish anybody preferring instead to work closely with farmers to improve accommodations.

The ministry was asked by the Farmworkers Union to investigate accommodations at 10 farms following an inquest last week into the death of a seven-month-old girl who fell into a pail of water at a renovated horse barn on a large Clearbrook produce farm.

It was revealed at the inquest that the farm owner had altered the barn to make 13 three-metre square sleeping cubicles without obtaining building permits or meeting fire and health requirements.

The inquest jury recommended that legislation be brought in empowering the ministry of health to establish minimum living standards for farm workers housed on their job sites.

Bonham said it is unlikely any farm owners will be taken to court for not obtaining building permits, saying the ministry would prefer to work with the owners to upgrade facilities.

"We don't want to punish anybody. We're trying to correct the problem," Bonham said.

He said it is hoped that ministry officials can cut down on the number of farmers going ahead with renovations without telling anybody.

Farmers have complained that it would be too costly to bring the living quarters — known as berry cabins — up to fire and health standards because they are only used during the summer growing season.

Maplewood deal complete

VANCOUVER (CP) — Financially-troubled Maplewood Poultry Ltd. has been purchased by Scott Poultry Co-operative of Coquitlam, although the federal and provincial governments appear to have the largest financial stake in the company.

Eugene Whelan, federal agricultural minister told a news conference the plant, which employs 135 workers, would re-open Sept. 2.

The purchase by Scott's subsidiary Pan-Ready Poultry (1980) Ltd. involves a total of $6.62 million, of which Ottawa is providing a loan of $3.75 million, while the B.C. government is guaranteeing a bank loan of $1 million for operating capital.

The new owners are to spend $1.5 million dollars upgrading the Abbotsford, B.C. plant, said Maplewood president Bryan Hambley.

Pan-Ready is also buying J. J. Hambley Hatchery (B.C.) Ltd., an associated company.

Lilydale Cooperatives Ltd. of Edmonton, which earlier expressed interest in acquiring Maplewood, will get $500,000 in federal funds to provide management and consulting services for the new firm.

B.C. Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Pan-Ready may also apply for provincial aid for capital improvement purposes.

Maplewood initially closed in April, then ran under receivership until June when provincial government aid dried up.

The federal government turned down an earlier offer from Cargill Grain Ltd. because the company is American-controlled.

Ottawa seen backing off on export tax

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government will probably back off on its proposal for a natural gas export tax, Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday.

Opposition to the tax was strong enough at the premiers' conference last week that the federal government should back down, Bennett said, adding the door was left open for other ways of generating federal government revenue.

Postal problem unsolved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks between Vancouver postal workers and management have failed to resolve a dispute over work scheduling and the matter must be taken up at the national level, a postal workers' spokesman said Thursday.

Lloyd Ingram, president of the Vancouver local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said major stumbling block is the loss of one out of three weekends off for postal sorters on the overnight shift.

The disagreement led to a 36-hour walkout affecting about 600 workers and curtailing severely curtailing mail delivery earlier this week.

Ingram said members decided to refer the unresolved issues to the national union. He did not rule out the possibility of another work stoppage.

"There's always the chance of a walkout when we have the type of management that we do."

A post office spokesman said management had agreed to give all workers two of three weekends off. It also agreed to allow flexibility in routine days off, suggest certain changes in starting time for shift work, and will submit to Ottawa a union request for two coffeee breaks for part-time workers, a decision which cannot be made locally.

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Students' Federation wants provincial government financial help for university students needing housing this fall.

A federation spokesman said Thursday about 15,000 to 20,000 students will be arriving in Vancouver during the next week. He said students from the Interior and northern regions face the greatest difficulty in finding accommodation.

The spokesman said there isn't enough rental housing.

Coal deal still elusive

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators have failed to reach agreement on a multi-billion-dollar deal for sale of 5.3 million tonnes of northeast British Columbia coal to Japan.

A memorandum of agreement was expected to be signed on Thursday, but B.C. Industry Minister Don Phillips said after a four-hour meeting with the chief Japanese negotiator that there are still problems to be ironed out.

Phillips, who appeared to be less optimistic about a deal than in the past, said, however, that an agreement will be concluded within a month.

While Phillips says the two sides are only $1 apart in the negotiations — which he says is not a major obstacle — the NDP has doubts about the figure, spokesmen said.

The NDP says that even if a memorandum is concluded, there will be further negotiations before a final deal is signed.

"Glow Boy"!
A break through in heating efficiency

For those who have a masonry fireplace and know it sends most of the heat up the chimney, Fresh Air Fireplaces has the solution: the Renaissance Circulation System Converter. It will transform your present masonry fireplace into an efficient, economical heat source. Available in a variety of sizes, it is easily installed in the firebox of most existing fireplaces.
Its operation is simple and unique — a controlled air intake at the bottom of the unit allows fresh air to enter the hollow bottom base, where it is heated, expands and rises in tubes that direct the heat into your home, not up the chimney.
The attractive glass doors serve two purposes: they eliminate most smoke, soot and sparks from entering your home and they prevent heated room air from escaping up the chimney.

Forgetting history

All Victorians can share the concerns of the Chamber of Commerce about the probable movement of the local tank farms from the Victoria area to the Duke Point site at Nanaimo.

If the move goes ahead, Victoria will lose a certain number of permanent jobs (some estimate as many as 200), the price of gasoline and home heating oil may rise because of extra transportation costs, and the potential for serious accidents may increase because of large amounts of oil being sent by truck or barge from Nanaimo to Victoria.

The Chamber is, however, being unfair when it places all the blame for the current situation on the oil companies. When Chamber president Cedric Steele accuses the companies of not cooperating with the Victoria community, he is ignoring recent Victoria history.

In the first place, it is not the oil companies who decided it was time to move from their current sites on the Songhees Reserve and in the Inner Harbor. That decision was made for them when their leases were not renewed on the grounds that the Songhees land was wanted for redevelopment. The companies have also been encouraged to leave James Bay on the grounds that the farms pose a fire hazard to nearby residential communities.

As Shell spokesman John Servais said yesterday, the companies would prefer to remain right where they are.

Second, once it was decided the companies must move, the Capital Regional Board took on the job of finding an alternative site for them. At one point, Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell was given the job.

It is worth noting, perhaps, that the idea of relocating the farms out of the Greater Victoria area first came from her. In December, 1978, she suggested that the tank farm should be relocated "somewhere north of the Malahat" so it could serve both Victoria and Nanaimo.

Later, Dowell and the regional board found a site that appeared to be suitable on land already zoned for industrial purposes in View Royal. Local residents protested vehemently, however, and the board gave way to their wishes.

Since, Victoria Ald. Bob Wright has raised the possibility of placing the tanks underground as part of the new Songhees development. No details on either the technical feasibility or the costs of this move have been made public, however.

While this has been going on, Nanaimo has been telling the oil companies they will be welcomed with open arms at Duke Point.

Victorians really can't blame the companies for thinking they would prefer to go where they are wanted, rather than continue a struggle to find a site in a community that has continually tried to frustrate their plans.

More harm than help?

It would be foolish to deny the sincerity of the Greenpeace Foundation. But it would be just as foolish to dismiss the possibility of Greenpeace harming rather than helping Greater Victoria overcome its sewage disposal problems.

The problem is Greenpeace's image in the minds of many people. Simply stated, there are likely hundreds of Victoria residents, including some politicans, who favor sewage treatment but who in no way want to be associated with Greenpeace or any of its causes or tactics.

It has taken Greenpeace months, even years, to decide that Victoria's decades-old sewage problem is worthy of its undivided attention. Local foundation president Michelle Forrest says "this (sewage disposal) is the big issue here and we will devote our energy towards it." The question of oil tankers in the Strait of Juan De Fuca notwithstanding, sewage pollution on southern Vancouver Island shores has been a big environmental issue for some time.

Now that Greenpeace has sorted out its local priorities, its tactics concerning the sewage disposal issue become clouded because Greenpeace itself is an issue.

Understandably, the chairman of the region's sewage committee, Ald. Bob Wright has reacted strongly to Greenpeace's involvement, especially its allegations of foot dragging on the part of local elected officials. The public must concede that Wright is an enthusiastic supporter of cleaning up Victoria's beaches and that if the public were willing to provide the money for treatment, it wouldn't take him long to spend it.

GEOFFREY GODSELL

Polish moment of decision

Strikers' actions may lead to Russian intervention, Poles fear.

The moment of decision is at hand in Poland.

The message being given to the striking workers by the communist government is: Accept the compromises we have offered and press us no further — if you want to avoid a takeover of Poland by Soviet troops.

Significantly, the Polish Roman Catholic Church — no friend of the government — has broken its virtual silence and advised the workers to settle for apparently the same reason.

It remains to be seen what effect this unusual joint appeal by the two power centers in Poland — the Communist Party and the Roman Cathlic Church — will have on the workers.

No let-up

The government's main negotiator with the striking shipyard workers in the Baltic port of Gdansk, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, interrupted his talks there Tuesday and returned to Warsaw for an urgent meeting of the Communist Party Politburo.

There was no report of any letup in the strikes but rather of their spreading. The most significant new walkouts reported were in Wroclaw, the industrial center far to the south in Silesia, long the home base of party leader Edward Gierek.

As the Politburo deliberated in Warsaw, Poles were able to read in the latest issue of the party newspaper, Trybuna Ludu, this stark editorial comment: "The current crisis can bring the country to the brink of catastrophe. It recalls the events of the 18th century."

What were the events of the 18th century?

Three successive partitions of Poland by its then-powerful neighbors — Russia, Prussia (the North Germans) and Austria (the South Germans) — in the years 1772, 1793 and 1795-96. In the last of these partitions, Poland disappeared from the map of Europe for more than a century. It did not return as an independent sovereign power until after the redrawing of the map of Europe in the peace settlement after World War I.

It disappeared from the map again in 1939 at the outset of World War II, the victim of yet another partition, effected this time by Hitler and Stalin. But with Hitler's defeat in 1945, an independent Poland again took its place among the powers. Tact may have prevented Trybuna Ludu from recalling this most recent partition and thereby possibly giving offence to Stalin's heirs, but Poles hardly need to be reminded of it.

The uniforms and slogans of 1980 may be different, but the burden of today's 35 million Poles remains what it has been for centuries: They are trapped by geography between two of Europe's biggest and most vigorous peoples — the Russians and the Germans, who so often have found themselves in armed conflict.

Repeatedly, Russians and Germans have moved against Poland to use it as a buffer against attack from the west or the east — as the case may be. That is why the Russians today are likely in the last resort to use force to keep Poland within the communist buffer system built up after World War II.

The aim of the buffer, a constant of history: to keep any potential threat from the west as far as possible from the doorstep of Mother Russia herself.

In Moscow, a Soviet foreign ministry official (quoted by Reuter on Monday) said deadpan when asked to comment on the Polish crisis: "As for the events taking place in Poland, they are completely the internal affairs of that state. This is our official viewpoint."

That is what Moscow says for the record. But Trybuna Ludu hardly would have editorialized as it did if the Polish Communist Party were not increasingly worried about possible Soviet intervention. (The paper wrote bluntly about Poland being geographically within "the security zone of the world's socialist power," in other words, of the Soviet Union.)

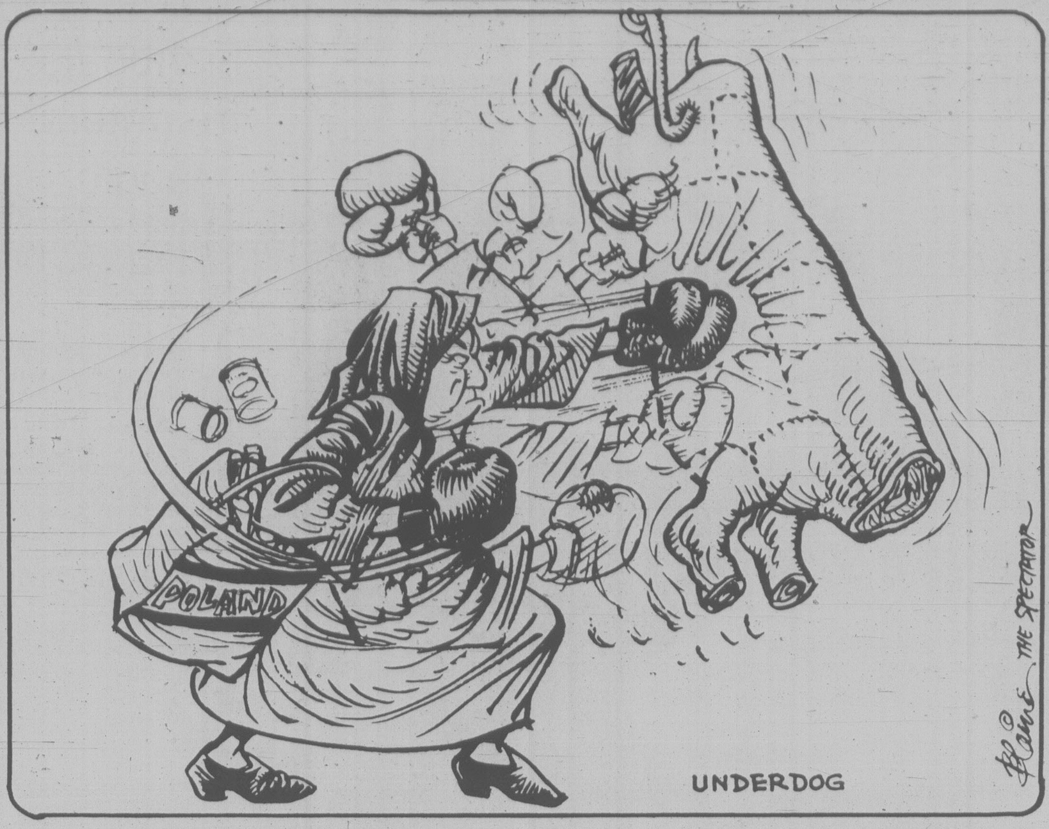
Neither would Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, archbishop of Warsaw, have taken the unusual step of intervening publicly to help the party — the Roman Catholic Church's unrelenting but unsuccessful rival for the ultimate loyalty of the Polish people — unless he were alarmed by the possibility of a greater threat to them both, in the form of Soviet tanks.

Met some demands

Party leader Gierek has gone a long way to meet some of the striking workers' demands. The mere fact of negotiating with them is an almost unprecedented concession. But the sticking point is likely to be the demand for free trade unions. It is hard to see how the party could go all the way to give the workers what they want on this without surrendering the ultimate overall control communist systems always imposed as a prerequisite for the exercise and retention of power. Even if the Polish party were willing, would Moscow allow it?

Perhaps such speculation was behind Cardinal Wyszynski's admonition to the workers, given pointedly at the National Religious Shrine at Czestochowa and carried most extraordinarily in prime time on government television:

"Even for the most just demands you can list, there can be nothing without work. I believe we must not exaggerate too much. . . The demands, should they be justified — and most of them are — cannot be satisfied right away."



TOM WICKER

Maintaining missile system

NEW YORK — President Carter compromised on practically everything at the Democratic National Convention but on a resolution to kill the MX mobile missile, he dug in his heels. "It is crucial," he said in a handwritten note to the delegates, "that our strategic nuclear forces not be vulnerable to a pre-emptive Soviet attack. The MX . . . is our optimum means . . ."

Behind this presidential artillery lay the acknowledged fact that bigger and more accurate Soviet missiles now threaten — or soon will — the American land-based ICBM force (but not the air and sea legs of the nuclear triad). Carter, moreover, had just formally approved a nuclear strategy calling for the ability to make the kind of precision strikes on Soviet military targets for which the MX would be designed.

Mobile based

But aside from horrendous questions of cost and the environment, is the MX as now planned really the "optimum means" available for "survivability" against Soviet attack and pinpoint retaliation on Soviet military targets? This is a question Congress and the public ought to explore more thoroughly than the Democratic delegates were able to.

The MX is supposed to be survivable, for instance, because of its mobile basing system. Two hundred MX missiles, each with 10 independently targetable warheads, will be shuttled among 4,600 silos distributed over 200 "racetracks," each 20 miles long, so that the Soviets theoretically will not know which silos shelter the missiles at the moment of an attack.

But the survivability disappears if SALT II is not ratified — which is now the unfortunate probability. The treaty would limit the Soviets to too few warheads on the relevant missiles for a barrage on all the silos at once; but if that limitation disappears with the treaty, the Soviets could put enough independently targetable warheads on each missile to take out all the silos. If we built more silos, they could deploy more warheads, in an endless race — with the United States at a disadvantage, since adding silos means adding more land to an already outsize project encountering much local oppostion.

The 7,000 square miles of Utah and Nevada that would be required for the 20 racetracks — even without such forced expansion — would be too vast for perimeter security. Each silo would require point security, which is far less effective and raises questions about maintaining the deception vital to survivability.

Even if the SALT II limits were in effect, the Soviets would have enough deliverable warheads so that the entire MX system would have to be deployed — not half of it or a third — before real survivability could be achieved. But once the whole system was on line, 2,000 accurate and independently targetable MX warheads would inevitably be perceived by the Soviets as a threat to their land-based missiles.

Inevitably, they would respond with their own new mobile missile system, driving the arms race up another round and adding to American verification and targeting problems. Thus, the United States would be meeting a Soviet "destabilizing threat" with one of its own — not much of a gain.

Sidney Drell, deputy director of the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, to whom I am indebted for much of the argument above, advocates instead a survivable fleet of small, conventionally powered submarines operating in East and West coastal waters (called SUM, for Shallow Underwater Mobile). He argues that 50 such vessels, each carrying two of the MX missiles now being developed, could be effectively hidden in several hundred thousand square nautical miles — safe even from the entire Soviet ICBM force.

SUM is thus highly survivable, probably would cost considerably less than the racetrack system, and would eliminate environmental objections. It matches the landbased missile plan in all important operating particulars, including command control, and Drell believes it superior in several aspects.

Desired punch

With 100 of the new missiles, each carrying 10 warheads, and near total survivability, SUM would assure the desired retaliatory punch. But it would deploy only half the warheads planned for the racetrack system; together with the wide dispersal of the submarines, which would make a coordinated preemptive attack by SUM more difficult than one from the racetrack force, this should reduce Soviet fears of an American "first strike," hence the likelihood of a dangerous new arms race.

Thus, SUM alone suggests that Carter's "optimum means" may be something considerably less, and that to keep our nuclear forces invulnerable we do not necessarily need to crank up the arms race or turn two states into nuclear graveyards.

Past the moon

A few years ago, Prime Minister Trudeau, with the help of his powerful tag-team, tried to wrestle inflation to the ground. After the dust had cleared, the result was that inflation had wrestled Mr. Trudeau and team about two miles past the moon into a well-insulated ivory tower. Mr. Trudeau and team also told the Canadian people to tighten their belts, or go to a foreign country if they could not find jobs in Canada, or that they could eat you-know-what, and of course, "you can only squeeze so much juice out of a lemon." That lemon, I presume, was (still is) the government and the astute bureaucrats who run the various ministeries and ministers. Some lemon!

Now, along with inflation, the country's economic situation has another horrific millstone, a $15 billion deficit, or somewhere in that badly run-down neighborhood.

I am positive that if Mr. Trudeau and team were at the head of some private corporation, they would be out of work in a very short time — like about eight years ago. — J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Grandiose plans

And so it was with B.C. Hydro's announcement of a loss of $15 million for the second quarter of this year.

All that happened while our ears still ring with the soothsaying pronouncements of Mr. J. P. Sheehan, Hydro's vice-president in charge of administration.

Only last March, Mr. Sheehan, defending Hydro's over-borrowing, said that "There is no doubt that Hydro can afford to carry the debt" (presently $5.4 billion). Obviously, Mr. Sheehan was wrong.

What should really worry us is who will make good Hydro's losses, now and in the near future, with Hydro's "expansion" borrowing ballooning?

Mr. Sheehan tried to calm us by saying that "Hydro's debt is not paid by the province — it is paid from Hydro's own revenue producing assets."

This can only mean one thing: no government subsidies, but an increase in the consumer's monthly bill. As if we weren't already paying more than our counterparts in Seattle and Montreal.

How good is Hydro's financial heath, with its indebtedness of $5.4 billion against assets of $6 billion?

This resembles a man having in his pocket $6.00, out of which $5.40 already belong to a finance company, leaving him all of 60 cents to crow about.

Would this man's solvency improve if we would let him borrow more?

And yet, B.C. Hydro has plans for huge loans for expansion, it is said. Mr. Sheehan maintains, "The need for additional borrowing is dictated by the mount of electricity our cusomers are going to need and the cost of building plants to meet those needs."

So far, B.C. Hydro, just as its U.S. counterparts, went by the rule that electricity consumption will continue to raise by seven per cent annually.

Does Hydro not know that this is no longer true?

Moreover, so far in the current year, U.S. consumption has not risen at all, despite a torrent heat wave that boosted the use of air conditioners throughout much of the country (U.S. News & World Report, August 4).

Shouldn't these ice-cold facts have a cooling effect on the grandiose borrowing schemes of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority? — John Willow, Sooke.

McCarthy replies

Your article, "Parents, too, can be ones abused," (Aug. 18), calls for rebuttal. In it you report the allegations of a couple who claimed they were "humiliated" by an investigation of a child abuse complaint.

At this point, I can only wish that your reporter had researched the matter more deeply. After investigation by my staff, I have concluded:

(1) the ministry's initial work on this case provided adequate grounds for an investigation;

(2) an experienced child abuse worker investigated the case reasonably, conscientiously and as tactfully as possible;

(3) the telephone accusation of child abuse was in fact essentially without foundation.

British Columbia's Helpline for Children was created to protect children from physical harm, as well as neglect. By law, any call for help, or information which indicates that intervention is needed, must be investigated.

It is an unfortunate fact that a certain number of calls will be mistaken, mischievous or ill-motivated. This is a burden which my ministry must bear, always mindful that any amount of difficulty or criticism is accepted gladly if we can save the life of one child.

So far this year, there are three cases before the courts involving the deaths of infants. — Grace M. McCarthy, Minister of Human Resources.

Missed a line

We wish to point out that your accidental omission of one line from our letter published August 23 ("Abortion Answer") has drastically altered the data presented.

It should read: "In actual fact recent polls show that less than 16 per cent favor unrestricted abortion. The majority of Canadians do approve of abortion but on very restricted grounds: (a) genuine threat to mother's life, (b) rape, (c) incest, (d) deformity of fetus, and (e) immaturity of mother. — Arla Rendle, Margot Ney, Co-Chairpersons, Victoria Pro-Life.

Le mot juste

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

Sam Goldwyn, from the deck of his liner, is reported to have called out "bon voyage" to his friends on the receding shore. To which the only response is a general collapse into asbestos gelos, which means inextinguishable laughter.

These facts emerge from a good-natured dictionary, Le Mot Juste, published last week, of the foreign words and phrases with which the English have (though less today than previously) adorned their language.

Ceteris paribus, or other things being equal, schools and Sir Ernest Gowers advise against importing betes noires for pet aversions; outside the works of Tom Stoppard fewer conversations are now conducted entirely in the Latin beloved of the courts, where ignoratio legis neminem excusat, exceptis, needless to say, excipiendis.

Discourse may be poorer as a result. There are as many opinions as there are people, but that is a loquacious way of saying quot homines, tot sententiae. Much condensed wisdom may also be lost, for fiat justitia, ruat caelum (let justice be done, though the heavens fall in ruin) precisely states the fears of one side in the nuclear debate.

Nearly all the value in the phrases listed comes from the French and classical languages. German has little to offer except brutish Teutonic epithets like Dummkopf and Schweinhund at one extreme and cloudly philosophical concepts like Geisteswissenschaft and Weltschmerz at the other.

There is, however, a little game to be played. During the 18th century the literati, who were by definition classically inclined, coined words from Greek and Latin roots which have never had an independent existence outside the Oxford English Dictionary. Indeed Chambers today has the word myristicivorour (feeding upon nutmegs) which is perfectly derived but describes no known species. With the aid of the chapters on prefixes and suffixes it is possible to derive yet more authentic new words. Mylomania would be a craving for fungus, ombrophany would be rainfall, a phycodendron would be a seaweed tree, and brachygynogamy would be marriage to a small woman. There is, mirabile dictu, scope for logogeny yet.

Latin drug rings prosper

By HUGH O'SHAUGHNESSY
London Observer

The value of narcotics exports from Latin America is reaching gigantic proportions and the drug traffickers, who are netting billions of dollars a year, are bidding for power in many countries of the region.

The immense funds they have at their disposal are allowing them to buy up or eliminate anyone who stands between them and the golden rain of profits.

In Bolivia exports of cocaine are estimated by United States investigators to be worth around $1 billion a year, making it by far the country's top export.

In Colombia the narcotics trade is conservatively estimated to be worth around $4 billion a year, mostly in marijuana and refined cocaine. It far outstrips in value Colombia's traditional export, coffee.

The drug connection is becoming increasingly powerful in the Caribbean. In Jamaica the value of illegal exports of locally grown marijuana, or ganja, as it is known, could be as big as all other exports put together.

Traffickers are key figures in the Bahamas, the string of islands off Florida, the more deserted of which serve as markets for narcotics in transit from South America or Jamaica to the U.S.

Recent reports also list the growing importance of the Turks and Caicos, a tiny group of British islands between the Bahamas and Haiti.

The population of this forgotten British colony is estimated at no more than 7,500 people, but its strategic location as the link in the communications chain between drug producers in Latin America and peddlers and addicts in the U.S. is said to be increasingly valuable as traffickers attempt to outwit the U.S. Coastguard and other American drug control and law enforcement agencies.

The rise to power of General Luis Garcia Meza in Bolivia last month has set alarm bells ringing in Washington. The Carter administration sees this coup as a clear-cut victory for the traffickers, whom they consider to be his principal backers.

Washington fought long and hard to frustrate the military coup this year, but eventually powerful narcotics traders based in the city of Santa Cruz, Bolivia's principal narcotics centre, had their way. The civilian political establishment was swept away a few weeks ago by officers with close connections with the narcotics trade.

Now the military regime is considering legalizing the export of cocaine. Coca bushes are openly and legally cultivated in Bolivia and raw coca leaves are chewed by the peasants of the high Andes as a counter to the extreme altitude and their monotonous and inadequate diet.

The international drug traffickers have, in the past few years, been making immense fortunes manufacturing and refining the leaves into cocaine products for export. About a hundred tons of pure cocaine is estimated by U.S. sources to leave Bolivia every year, often on light aircraft which fly from airstrips around Santa Cruz.

In Colombia, parliament is set to debate the legalization there of marijuana. Years of effort by the Colombian police and army have made no dent in the fabulously profitable trade or halted the fleets of light planes and small boats which set out from Colombia's Caribbean coast with their cargoes of drugs for the U.S. market.

Many respectable Colombians feel the only way of controlling and taxing the marijuana trade is to make it legal. The U.S. is opposed to any such legislation.

Similar calls for the legalization of marijuana have been made in Jamaica. Pressure to legalize ganja will grow steadily this year as the island counts the loss of its banana crop, which was wiped out by the recent hurricane, thus robbing the country of one of its most important sources of export earnings, money Jamaica desperately needs in its present deep financial crisis.

STRAY FEATHERS

The migrant 'river'

Thanks to some early-morning work in the garden with a spade, I've solved a problem I didn't know I had.

It all began like this: I'm digging quietly, breaking up some lawn to extend a flower bed. It's early. The neighbors are still abed and the noises of the day haven't yet begun.

Suddenly a small, familiar sound drifts down from the sky overhead. It's a bird sound — a particular kind of bird sound, one I've heard often before, but nearly always at night. It's the gentle, lisping call of a migrating warbler, the kind of call that's supposed to keep them in contact with each other as they fly through the darkness.

With that call my mind, which had been idling, went into gear. First it reminded me that we were well into the fall migration and that almost any night would have thousands of migrants on the move. Then it reminded me that, though early, it was day, not night. Lastly, my old mental memory box turned back to an almost-forgotten morning long ago when, under similar conditions, a similar sound had put me on to the tail end of the nocturnal journey of several warblers.

* * *

This little mental exercise took less time to do than it took to tell about, but its end result was to effectively turn me from my appointed task.

For a few moments I stood leaning on the spade, listening.

Soon another call, and another, and I was scanning the sky. At first I saw nothing, then, luckily, I spotted a tiny bird cross above the house — maybe a couple of hundred feet up — and dive into the top of a nearby Douglas-fir. It was a migrating warbler that had begun its overnight journey somewhere north of here and was ending it in my neighbor's yard, just another stop in many that would eventually see it somewhere in South America next winter.

But, strangely, the identity of the bird — or speculation on its destination — were of less interest to me at that moment than was the volume of the sound it made. Suddenly, after years of hearing the same kind of sound, a new idea of how high birds fly when migrating at night was beginning to make room for itself in my head.

What started this chain of thinking was the realization that the call I'd heard in daylight was about as loud as those I'd heard at night. But my daylight caller, this time and on that earlier occasion, hadn't been more than two good tree-lengths up; yet for years on hearing that call at night I'd thought of birds several hundred feet up, maybe even thousands of feet.

* * *

Now, in one of those rare flashes of insight — belated, in this case — I realized the obvious: a tiny bird, of the kind I'd just seen, with a voice like I'd just heard, couldn't be heard if it was several hundred, or thousands, of feet up.

Suddenly a long-cherished picture of night migrants began to dissolve. Until this morning, whenever I'd thought of birds migrating at night, a picture of tiny travellers, thousands of feet above the earth, materialized in my mind. Now a new picture is beginning to form, erasing, and replacing, parts of the old one.

Now when I think of night migrants, there'll still be a picture of tiny birds against the darkness but they'll be a few thousand feet lower than in the past. Not only that, I'll be seeing a picture of a river of birds — a river that may be several hundred feet deep, with flocks of birds moving along it at various levels.

More important, my new picture tells me that the gentle sounds I hear at night are coming from only a small part of that great flood — the very bottom of the river — and that instead of being high overhead, they're just above the trees.

Funny what you can turn up with a spade.

Let's not and say we did

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — The Omar Khayyam Club is a select dining club founded to keep green the memory of Edward Fitzgerald. Occasionally it arranges outings for itself, and every so often its members plan to visit Fitzgerald's Suffolk grave, and then don't, because it would be so boring. But why, asked Cyril Ray, should they be so unadventurous? Why keep on not visiting the grave of Fitzgerald, when at no greater cost they could not visit the Taj Mahal — not go to Niagara — not climb the Statue of Liberty?

A thing is not valueless, he plainly realized, merely because you don't actually do it; a doughnut would be nowhere without the hole. I enjoy London because there are concerts, art galleries, theatres; yet I go to them seldom enough — at least compared to my country cousins who come up twice a year, let alone the Americans who pound round the culture beat until, as they say, they are "all museumed out."

Just because you don't actually watch them, you'd be wrong to think you have no need for those worthy TV programs people tell the audience researchers they admire — though they've never actually seen the one last week. Nor are the articles in newspapers which you don't read a waste of space: far from it. I've been skipping for 30 years news stories headlined Disarmament Talks Start/Finish/Break down/Resume/Deadlock/Restart/Threatened/Final Day and I haven't missed a thing, since armament was not about to be discontinued anyway; but I wouldn't have approved of a newspaper which left all that out. Any more than you would respect one without the article on the dollar or Indonesia or the reform of prisons which you are certainly going to read tomorrow.

Not selling the IBM shares was the dominant obsession of a family described in Adam Smith's book The Money Game. Granpappy got in on the ground floor, bought them cheap and watched happily as they rose; his dying advice to his son was to hang on to them — he must never, never, never sell the IBM shares. So the son worked hard all his life, and got a mortgage, and scratched around to send his son to college; and the son worked hard, and raised a mortgage . . . three generations living exactly the same lives in every way as if they hadn't owned a single share.

You could argue that in all those cases it was at least reassuring for the people to know they could do these things, even if in practice they didn't. But there's also a positive side to definitely not doing them. Ogden Nash said the trouble with sins of omission was that they were no fun: nobody flings open the door of the bar and calls "The next round of unwritten letters is on me!" But Ogden Nash, clearly, hadn't mastered the delicate art of playing off one thing you are not doing against another. At this moment, for example, I am not, as you might think, writing an article; I am thankfully not making a stew. Properly manipulated, the act of not doing the ironing can always be balanced against not getting in touch with the Gas Board. And come to think of it, the Gas Board makes a whole way of life out of not getting in touch with me — I wonder what they do instead?

* * *

Simply saying "I don't" can block off any unwelcome area of life like a row of sandbags. Look at the elderly ladies who say flatly "I don't go by Tube" — nobody screeches at them "Why on earth not?" Or the couples who have long since ceased to have any interest for outsiders (or even, one sometimes suspects, for each other) beyond the fact that they are Not Married; well, at least the proliferation of unmarried couples ought to take the force out of that particular pitch.

I escaped from my usual guilty labyrinth of excuses one golden day with the simple words "I don't play football" — the sky didn't fall, there was no howl of reproach; "I don't" I belatedly realized, is just the polite adult equivalent of "I won't" from a stubborn child. One is constantly coming up against people who announce that they don't eat offal, too bad about your delicious gratin of chicken livers; who don't read science fiction, so the future will take them entirely by surprise; and the world seems to be just now full of people (reversing Lady Bracknell) who make an occupation out of not smoking. Well, fine, if they can get credit for it — trouble is, only diplomats and toddlers who are becoming dry at night ever get much praise for what they don't do.

Everyone, remarked Steve Race recently, ought to have something they no longer do any more. Certainly there's a positive pleasure to be got from not having to eat up one's mutton fat, or see the Headmistress, or wash nappies; I still give thanks that I no longer have to grind out the Undiscovered British Beauties series on Woman's Own. The trouble is that we don't usually remember the awful things we are not doing; and we're still less conscious of the things we've never done at all.

But maybe that is the real frontier lurking in a whole lot of apparently static lives: a hidden no-go area where your thoughts or actions automatically stop short. It's like the door in Alice in Wonderland: if you could just find the key, some extraordinary things might happen. Forgive me if I sound a bit like Andrew Carnegie. At least I suppose I do: actually I never read these self-help books, do you?

'Threat' riles hotel owner

"This sounds like a threat," shouted a Victoria hotel owner at Thursday night's Victoria city council meeting.

Peter Hartnell, proprietor of the Queen Victoria Inn and the Thunderbird Motel, had just told council he would apply for a demolition permit to tear down both his buildings and replace them with two huge hotels if the aldermen allowed a Victoria developer to build an apartment-hotel at 605 Douglas.

Annoyed by Hartnell's conduct, Ald. Ken Sinclair hinted the hotelman might be better off if he didn't raise such a fuss because he had an application before council for an apartment building rezoning.

That's when Hartnell shouted that Sinclair's remarks sounded like a threat.

"No, it's a fact," replied Sinclair.

"It's a disgrace," Hartnell shot back.

Council then gave approval in principle to the plans for the construction of an apartment hotel at 605 Douglas, next door to Hartnell's Queen Victoria Inn.

That approval brings the proposal to the public hearing stage two weeks from now.

The property is now occupied by a half-completed apartment building about which Hartnell has complained for years.

Council also approved his plans for a 73-unit apartment building on Quebec, but Sinclair warned that the building looked a lot like a hotel.

He said Hartnell should be careful not to use the building as a hotel.

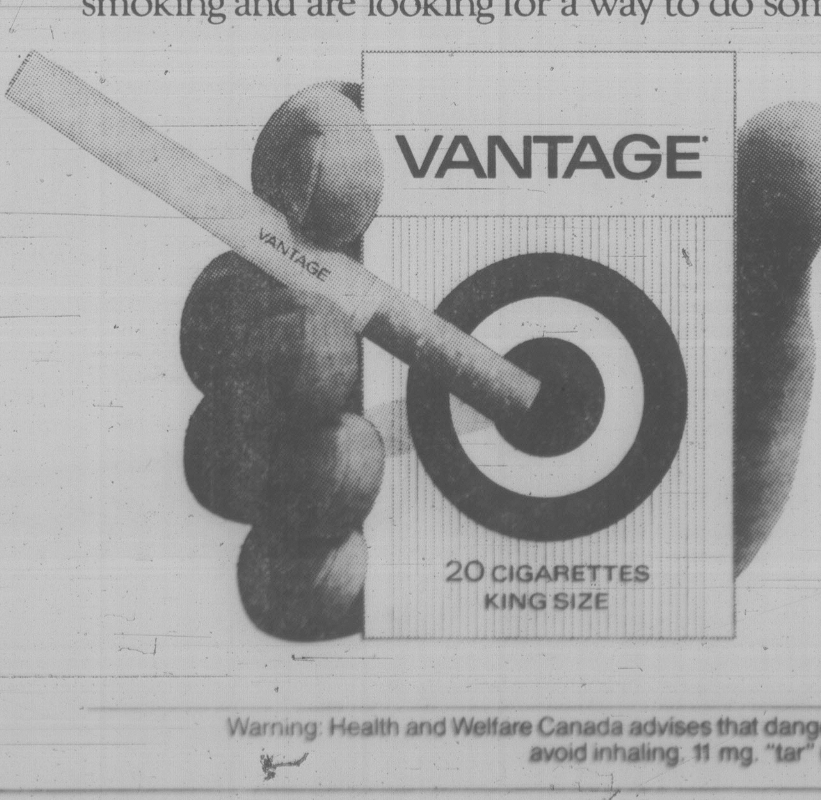
TO SMOKE OR NOT TO SMOKE.

There's a good chance that you've been giving some serious thought to smoking.

The question is, what are you going to do about it? If you've never smoked, or if you've quit smoking, we're not urging you to start.

But if you're a smoker who's not ready to give up the enjoyment you get from smoking, we'd like to call your attention to Vantage.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who may have had second thoughts about smoking and are looking for a way to do something about it.



Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

Vantage. That is the answer.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked— avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

Dalai Lama to visit B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Dalai Lama, exiled god-king of Tibet, will visit Vancouver Oct. 23 as part of a 17-day Canadian tour, the New York office of Tibet says.

The office said the Dalai Lama will make several appearances on his five-day stopover here, including a public talk at the University of British Columbia's Vancouver Institute and an interfaith service at a local church.

The Canadian tour is in response to invitations from various universities and organizations, as well as from the more than 500 Tibetans who have settled in Canada in the last several years, the office said.

The Dalai Lama, recognized leader of six million Tibetan Buddhists, was exiled from his homeland 20 years ago during the Chinese occupation of Tibet. He now lives in India.

BCDC V-P goes

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Milroy, 53, has resigned as vice-president of the B.C. Development Corp. to become chief financial officer for Richmond-based MacDonald Dettwiler and Associates Ltd., a leading supplier of satellite technology, the corporation has announced.

Newell Morrison, chairman and chief executive officer for the corporation, has named three vice-presidents to replace Milroy. Jim Wong will be in charge of financial operations, Peter Breikss responsible for Duke Point and the land division and James D. McLean, urban redevelopment and marine technology.

Row halts project

WHISTLER (CP) — More than 100 construction workers building a $51-million resort at Whistler Mountain walked off the job Thursday in a dispute over non-union workers.

A spokesman for the Construction Labor Relations Association said the union workers are refusing to work with non-union workers on one of the lots.

The Whistler project 80 kilometres north of Vancouver involves construction of hotels, condominiums and commercial outlets linked to extensive ski-resort facilities.

Roughly 97 per cent of the Whistler work force is estimated to have union membership.

Construction unions have expressed fears their control of major construction sites will be seriously crippled and their contracts eroded if a contractor on an adjacent project within the over-all development can undercut their wages.

Cease-and-desist

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board issued a cease-and-desist order Thursday against more than 250 striking workers at two area pulp mills.

Officials of Intercontinental Pulp and Prince George Pulp said the board ordered the workers, members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, to return to their jobs.

The dispute centred on Intercontinental's plans to contract out work during an upcoming maintenance shutdown.

2-year pact voted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Employees of International Harvester Co. of Canada Ltd., on strike since Aug. 8, have reached an agreement with the company, a spokesman for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said Thursday.

The union signed a two-year contract covering 19 workers who are to return to work today.

Details of the pact were not released.

Faculty pay hiked

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A two-year contract giving 120 faculty members average salary increases of 9.2 and eight per cent each year has been approved by New Caledonia College board.

The contract also eliminates the lowest two steps on the salary scale setting a range from $21,700 to $34,800 this year.

"It was a good agreement from everyone's point of view," Charles McCaffray, college principal, said Wednesday.

The two-year pact, which replaces the one that expired March 31, will also give the college administration greater flexibility in planning courses.

Commissioner raps board

VERNON (CP) — A member of the B.C. Vegetable Marketing Commission has accused his own organization of not meeting the needs of B.C. Interior growers.

Ben Hove, a commission member and former chairman of the Interior Marketing Agency, made the statement following four hours of sometimes bitter debate in this Okanagan city.

The commission was established in April by amalgamating two boards representing vegetable growers on the coast and in the Interior.

Hove said the commission is acting against interior growers' interests by refusing them the right to establish sub-marketing agencies to handle vegetable sales and pricing throughout the southern Interior.

Coast growers currently have a number of sub-agencies which assist in marketing, pricing and sales.

The commission has said it turned down the request on technical grounds and invited the agency to reapply.

However, Don Gilmore, commission chairman, said the commission could get a better deal for producers in the long run by setting up a single sales desk, which would be more economical and avoid duplicating expenses incurred by several sales operations.

He said growers should be working towards a single sales desk for all the province but admits this may take time.

Interior vegetable growers says they are angry over some coast producers selling vegetables to retail organizations with outlets throughout B.C. at prices lower than what interior producers can offer.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices stabilized in relatively slow pre-holiday trading as the government reported a record increase in the index of leading economic indicators but fears of interest rate increases persisted.

The leading indicators — the closest thing the U.S. government has to an economic crystal ball — rose 4.6 per cent in July, easily surpassing theprevious record of 3.2 per cent, set in June 1975.

While that was seen as evidence that the recession may be nearing an end, analysts noted that one cause of the rapid increase was a surge in the money supply.

That increase has caused concern on Wall Street and led to speculationthat the Federal Reserve Board will tighten credit, thereby pushing up interest rates further. Rates have moved up sharply in recent days.

Utility stocks, which are sensitive to rising rates, were mixed. Virginia Electric Power was down ⅛ to $10⅞ and American Telephone and Telegraph was up ⅜ to $53⅜.

Precious metals stocks, which had remained strong earlier in the week, also turned mixed. Homestake Mining dropped ⅝ to $78⅝ and ASA was unchanged at $57¼.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed Friday at 483.9, up 1.2.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. at the Calgary public stockyards consisted of 650 head, mainly feeder cattle with a light run of D3-5 slaughter cows.

D3-5 cows $49-52.

Receipts for feeder cattle included mostly good quality grass yearling steers and heifers. Trade was active with a broad local demand.

Good feeder steers sold $2 higher while feeder heifers traded steady. Light supplies of stock steer and heifer calves 300 lbs. and over met moderate local trade. Stock steer calves traded steady while stock heifer calves traded $2 higher.

Good stock steer calves 300-500 lbs. $90-96. Stockyards will be closed Monday. Trading will resume Tuesday.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were sharply lower in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday. The short end of the market was down 25 cents Friday. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues were off one point. Corporate issues were down thre-quarters. Day-to-day money was available at 10 per cent. Dealers said there was no news to influence trading, so the market continued to suffer from Wednesday's weak reception of the $3 million U.S. treasury bills.

Shamrocks pack it in

NEW WESTMINSTER — Victoria Shamrocks can pack up their sticks for another season and, for many of them, go under care of the club physician for the next week or so.

New Westminster Salmonbellies dealt the death blow to Irish hopes for a third straight berth in the Mann Cup senior championship by administering a 15-8 thrashing to the injury-riddled defending champions in Game Six of the Western Lacrosse Association final Thursday at Queen's Park Arena.

The win gave the Salmonbellies the best-of-seven series 4-2 and wrote finish to a story-book ending.

They defeated Coquitlam Adanacs four games to three by coming from behind a three-game deficit in the semi-final, trailed the Shamrocks 2-1 before coming from behind and now advance against Brampton Excelsiors in the best-of-seven Mann Cup championship starting next week in Brampton.

The Excelsiors crushed Peterborough Red Oaks 14-4 Thursday to win the Ontario Lacrosse Association final 4-1.

Victoria and Peterborough met in last year's Mann Cup with the Shamrocks winning at home in four straight games. Peterborough defeated the Shamrocks in seven games in 1978.

The Shamrocks started well enough in the finals and held a 2-1 lead in games at one point, but New Westminster won 9-8 at home to square matters on Monday and then rallied for a 14-13 win Wednesday at Memorial Arena. That was the decider.

Shamrocks were hard hit by injuries, too numerous to mention individually, but they never used that as an excuse.

"The Salmonbellies were hungrier than our guys," said Shamrock general manager Ralph Baker, while praising the winners.

"They were more aggressive in going after loose balls. They were more determined. They were full value for the win and are the team that should be representing the West."

Shamrocks were never really in the game as the Salmonbellies held period leads of 3-1 and 9-5 and had a 53-49 edge in shots.

Dave Durante scored five goals for New Westminster. Brian Tasker added three and Gord Roberts, Bob Tasker, Bob Johnson, Mark Tuura, Bill Mosdell, Eric Cowieson and Ivan Tuura counted once each.

Victoria took 14 minutes in penalties to 12 for the Salmonbellies.

Race route laid out for runners, viewers

By MAX LOW

You might think designing a marathon course is a cinch. You just rush out, mark off 26 miles and add 385 yards, right?

Well, not quite. There are several things to take into consideration, according to Alex Marshall, race director for the first annual Royal Victoria Marathon, Saturday, Sept.20.

"I've run 15 marathons so I had a fairly reasonable idea of what to look for," says the man who mapped out the course that makes two laps of a route from Mile 0 in Beacon Hill Park to Willows Beach in Oak Bay and back.

"Firstly, you have to try to find a relatively flat course and avoid traffic so you don't block main arteries."

Making a double loop of the course is not unusual in marathons. There are two laps of the route in the 11th annual Seattle Marathon and, in fact, the Vancouver Marathon used to make five loops of Stanley Park, before officials found it was too hard to control.

There are many marathons where contestants just go out and run the 26 miles from point A to point B, such as the famed Boston Marathon. But Alex believes that is the worst kind of course both for spectators who only see the runners once and for the thousands of competitors who leave all their gear at the start line and end up 26 miles away.

"The Royal Victoria course will be excellent for spectators," he points out, "as they'll see the runners start, watch them make the turn at the 13-mile mark and then see them finish the race at Mile 0."

At 47, Alex Marshall is still running in marathons, but not this one, as with his race director's duties he'll be far too busy.

"I've just got back from running in jolly old England," he said. "The Queen's private gardens in Windsor Castle was the starting point."

Called the Polytechnics Marathon, it started in 1902 and, with a few years off for two wars, has been going for 66 years.

"That was the race in 1902 that saw the crazy extra 385 yards added", Alex explained. "Before that, the marathon had always been 26 miles but that year the start was moved back 385 yards so the queen's children could watch the start."

Now Marshall has whisked from the Queen's private gardens to jolly old Victoria and our own Royal Marathon, for which, he says, there are already more than 600 entries. Sixty per cent are from out of town.

When entries close on Tuesday, Sept.2, Alex expects close to 1,000 runners in event sponsored by the Times and Radio VI90.

As well as around 150 to 200 hardy souls who have stuck with the Royal Victoria Marathon clinic that has held weekly Sunday runs since New Year's Day, there are expected to be plenty of 'name' runners. Alex isn't sure, however, if Victoria's national Olympic team member Mike Creery intends to compete.

"I doubt if he will as he is in New Zealand with a B.C. team and when he gets back he has to train for a big marathon in Tokyo toward the end of October."

However, two Vancouver marathoners who usually run around the 2 hours, 20-minute mark — Bill McIntosh and Jack Taunton — aren't going to let the hectic globetrotting schedule upset their plans.

They are also both competing in New Zealand with the B.C. team and will return on Sept.2. After that, it's off to the Montreal International Marathon in the second week of September . . . and, then . . . back to the coast for our royal event.

Chilled Harper moves into lead

Times News Services

Jamie Harper's hands were so numb he could barely feel his clubs as he bogeyed four of the first five holes in second-round play at the Canadian junior golf championships at the Red Deer Golf and Country Club on Thursday.

But the 16-year-old from Nanaimo fought off the numbing wind and the chilling rain to card a four-over-par 76 for a two-day total of 146 — enough to give British Columbia the interprovincial team championship and Harper a one-shot lead for the junior title.

Harper ran off nine consecutive pars before taking a bogey on the 15th hole. He followed that with a birdie, a par and a bogey to retain his lead in the 72-hole championship.

Craig Kindrat of Selkirk, Man., fired a fine one-over-par 73 to move into second spot at 147.

Harper's 76, along with a 79 from teammate Glen Bannister of Abbotsford and an 83 from Glen Hauser of Kelowna, gave B.C. a total of 454 and its first team championship since 1972.

At Sydney, N.S., Monique Langlais survived a bogey on 17 and a double-bogey on 18 to take a one-stroke lead into today's final round at the Canadian senior women's championship.

Langlais, of Bouschallel, Que., finished Thursday's second round with a three-over-par 81, which with her first-round score of 82 gives her a 163 total, one stroke better than American Anne Gookin and Janice Vining of Don Mills, Ont.

The Ontario foursome of Kay Helleur, Colline Carmichael, Sue Kessler and Margaret Munro won the interprovincial team title with a 506 total. B.C. finished second in the team event with a 514 total. Alberta was third at 517 with Manitoba fourth at 526.

★ ★ ★

ALSO IN GOLF: Mark Lye and Artie McNickle, a pair of tour non-winners, fired five-under-par 66s to share the opening-round lead in the $275,000 B.C. Open at Endicott, N.Y. . .

★ ★ ★

Norm Jarvis would have shared the lead after the first round of the B.C. PGA assistants tournament at Delta but he turned himself in for an error on the green and was given a two-stroke penalty . . . His par-72 became a 74, two shots behind defending champion Ed Tugous of Burnaby . . . Al Robertson of Glen Meadows was second with 73 . . .

Vitas incensed following upset

NEW YORK (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis spent three of the most frustrating hours of his career on the stadium court at the United States Open tennis championships Thursday night. He then spent 15 minutes venting his anger by blasting nearly everyone who played a part in his second-round defeat by little-known Hank Pfister.

"It was a joke," said the No. 5 seed from nearby Kings Point, N.Y., after Pfister's 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 1-6, 7-6 victory. "It was the worst central umpire (Zeno Frau) for a match I've seen.

"They want this to be the biggest tournament in the world, then they have no net judge and roving judges on the line? With only one other match going on?"

Pfister called the win "my second biggest, next to beating Connors in Las Vegas in '78. And I beat Gerulaitis in his own backyard."

In women's play defending-champion Tracy Austin embarrassed Rosie Casals 6-0, 6-0 in 46 minutes; third-seed Chris Evert Lloyd topped Peanut Louie 6-3, 6-1; No. 16 Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia fell to JoAnne Russell 6-2, 6-3; No. 11 Kathy Jordan beat Sharon Walsh 6-1, 6-4; No. 12 Virginia Wade of Britain struggled for the second time in a row before ousting Claudia Casabianca of Argentina 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Blues finish with a victory

EUGENE, Ore. — Jack Uhey smashed a two-run double to key a four-run outburst in the eighth inning Thursday night which boosted Victoria Blues to a 9-1 decision over Eugene Emeralds in Northwest League baseball action.

Paul Kirsch hit a bases-empty homer for Victoria in the seventh inning and also had a single.

Eric Davis doubled to score Crestwell Pratt for Eugene's only run in the second inning.

It was the last Northwest League game for both teams.

Sad ending gives way to a bright beginning

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It's a time for sad endings and bright new beginnings.

This will be the last column I'll write for the Victoria Times since starting the twice-weekly series about 10 years ago.

But, starting next week, this column will appear in the new Times-Colonist outdoors page each Friday.

In addition, the page will carry arch-rival (until now) Alec Merriman's column about the best spots for trout and salmon fishing around Vancouver Island and a feature article on some aspect of outdoor recreation around the Island.

During these times of increasing gasoline and travel costs, more people will likely opt to spend their vacation and weekend recreation time on the Island rather than braving the ferry lineups for a trip to the Mainland.

The outdoors page will offer a few suggestions on how and where to make that time more enjoyable.

Several times each year, pleasure boats explode in North American waters and some of these accidents could be prevented with a little care and attention to certain details during refueling.

Here's a handy checklist to obtain the correct mixture of fuel and oil while preventing onboard spills or accumulation of fumes in closed areas:

● If your boat is equipped with a "blower", make sure you use it correctly.

● Stick around while your boat is being refueled. You'll know whether or not the job was done correctly.

● Remove portable tanks from the boat, If fuel is spilled, it won't end up in the bilge.

● Mix fuel and oil as follows: put in one gallon of fuel, add all the oil, close the tank and shake it, then open it and add the remaining fuel. For fixed tanks, add the oil and fuel simultaneously through a metal funnel, blending the two as they enter the tank.

● Always keep the pump nozzle in contact with the tank. This prevents a static spark (it's also the reason for using a metal funnel on fixed tanks).

● Wipe the outside of the tank to remove all oil and fuel — and get rid of the wipe rag at the dock.

Island Mountain Ramblers have planned a number of interesting trips for September. Make sure you cantact the leader at least two days before the trip for last-minute particulars.

The trips are:

Sept. 28: Mt. Arrowsmith work party on Northwest Bay route (Bob Tustin 754-5403 or Mike Taylor 748-1309).

Salmon fishing around Vancouver Island has been good in Saanich Inlet, Active Pass, around Nanaimo and in the vicinity of Cape Beale and Swale Rock.

There are also indications some hefty coho might start arriving in the Sooke-Victoria waters this weekend — part of the advance of the big run expected through Juan de Fuca.

★ ★ ★

At the moment, it looks as if most of the main logging roads will be open Saturday for the start of grouse hunting season on Vancouver Island.

Junior Salmonbellies hold on to edge Cables

BURNABY (CP) — New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies failed to score in the final period but held on for a 9-8 decision over Burnaby Cablevision in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League playoff game Thursday night.

The win gives New Westminster a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven final.

Brian Cowie and Rob Dalzell led New Westminster with three goals each, and Loyd Symons provided two.

Willow Tauries pick for fillies stake race

One of the feature races of the season will highlight the standardbred racing card at Sandown Raceway Saturday.

The B.C. Sires Stakes, a one-mile pace and trot for three-year-old fillies, has drawn a starting field of seven for a total purse of $9,510.

This is the first in a series of five races, the second to be held at Cloverdale in November.

The entries and drivers:

Willow Tauries will probably rank as the favorite after having enojyed a good season on the prairies.

The B.C. Sires Stakes for colts will take place at Sandown on Monday, Labor Day.

Meanwhile on Thursday, two huge payoffs marked the action before a crowd of 1,240.

Roaming Pence, an 11-year old roan gelding, driven by Jim Gagnon, was completely overlooked by the punters in the fourth race to return $65.10 on the front end and combine with Mark Missile for a $434.20 Exactor.

Then in the ninth, in a rousing four-horse drive, the eight-year old bay gelding Noble Metre, driven by Willie Urquhart, scored a neck decision over Northridge with Baron Lea A a close-up third and the pace-setting Lucky Armbro fourth in a blanket finish.

The Triactor 6-8-5 returned $956.

In other news, it was revealed that Joe Hudon, the leading driver at the meeting, ranked eighth in North America in official driver standings at the end of July.

Five of the first 10 top drivers were Canadians with Herve Filion, who does most of his driving in the United States, being the leader.

And today at Hollywood Park in Los Angeles, the four-year old Michaels Glory, which set the track record of 1:58.4 in his last race at Sandown, gets his chance in a big stakes event.

He will be driven by part owner and trainer Rick Graham.

Guenter collects another victory

SASKATOON — Rob Guenter earned his second straight victory to give New Westminster Terminal Pub a 3-1 record in preliminary eliminations of the Canadian senior "A" men's softball championships Thursday.

The pickup from Victoria Budgets relieved former Budget Andy Konopacki in the seventh inning and picked up the win when New Westminster scored two unearned runs in the eighth.

There was more bad news for the other Victoria Budget on the squad, however. Catcher Bob Burrows dislocated his index finger and was replaced by Mel Armstrong in the sixth inning. Burrows had been given the designated hitter role Wednesday because of stretched knee ligaments suffered in the club's opener Tuesday.

In other games Brookfield Elks of Nova Scotia took advantage of two errors in the 13th inning to beat Charlottetown Sportsmen of Prince Edward Island 1-0; Ontario beat New Brunswick 3-0 but lost 4-2 to Manitoba; host Saskatoon beat Quebec 5-3; Newfoundland blanked the Northwest Territories 1-0 and Saskatchewan beat the Yukon, 4-1.

B.C. wins twice

EDMONTON — Diane Whittingham of Victoria scored in each game as B.C. won its first two starts in the Canadian senior women's field hockey championships.

Dana Sinclair of Vancouver scored twice and Whittingham once as B.C. blanked Nova Scotia 3-0 and Debbie Smith, Sarah Angus, Whittingham and Mairi Anne Longmore of Victoria and Audrey Shimka of Vancouver scored goals as B.C. whipped Saskatchewan 5-0.

Quebec is in the same five-team grouping as B.C. and is also 2-0 after the first day of round-robin play.

B.C. squad gains final

TORONTO — British Columbia advanced to the final of the Canadian junior men's basketball championships with a 99-79 triumph over Ontario Thursday.

Al Tait of Richmond led B.C. with 23 points, Greg Wiltjer of Victoria added 19 and Kelly Dukeshire, also of Victoria, scored 14.

B.C. will meet Nova Scotia in the final.

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Lions will not renegotiate Harry Holt's contract during the 1980 Canadian Football League season, says general manager Bob Ackles.

Ackles didn't shut the door, however, on the multi-talented tight end who has five touchdowns in seven games this season.

"We don't renegotiate contracts," Ackles said. "If I did that for Harry, we'd have a line a mile long outside my office." Ackles said he was willing to talk to Holt's agents and, if they can come up with a different approach that doesn't involve tearing up the contract, he would listen.

Meanwhile, the Lions announced the signing of former Toronto Argonauts quarterback Alvin White. White, who attended Calgary Stampeders' training camp, had his busiest CFL season in 1978 with the Argos. In five games he completed 65 of 135 passes for 936 yards.

UVic rowing gets a boost

It will be a short hop for five and a long one for a sixth, but the transfer of affiliation by Shelley Donald, Kelly Jacklin, Janice Mason, Lisa Roy, Katie Burke and Andrea Schreiner is going to give the University of Victoria rowing program a great boost.

All six world-class rowers have decided to attend UVic to train under Canadian national women's coach Al Morrow.

Schreiner, a native of St. Catharines, Ont., finished fourth in the world singles sculls in 1979, has been a member of the Canadian national team for the past three years, and competed for the Ridley Graduate Club in Ontario.

Donald, Mason, Roy and Burke all competed for Victoria City Rowing Club while Jacklin, a native of Victoria, was a member of the Burnaby Lake Aquatic Club the past two years.

Morrow is ecstatic.

"That this talented group has decided to continue training and compete for UVic," he said, "is an indication that our rowing program is coming of age."

Assistant Ted Daigneault will handle the women's crews while Morrow will oversee the entire program.

At least 35 men and women are expected to try out for spots on various UVic crews.

UVic and Victoria City share facilities on Elk Lake. Morrow said plans are underway to improve facilities, including the possible construction of a new boat house if a fund-raising drive by the Victoria Rowing Society is a success.

Yarrow Cup test

The annual Yarrow Cup competition for men's doubles will get under way Saturday at the Canadian Pacific Lawn Bowling Club greens. Following is the opening draw:

9 a.m. — Yoxall (V) vs Brown (LH), Waller (OB) vs Hawes (GH), Wright (CP) vs Jones (GH), Macdonald (GH) vs Fraser (LH), Day (GH) vs Mercer (B), Weatherby (CP) vs Carpenter (LH), Heaney (CP) vs North (V), Ramsay (CP) vs Dixon (GH).

BILLS ACQUIRE JESSIE

Hobie Cats sail in nationals

Around our shores

Victoria will be well represented this weekend when the first national Hobie Cat championships are sailed out of Jericho Beach in Vancouver.

Among those who will be competing for national honors and qualification for the world championships will be Stephen Knight, Brian McLeod, Jim Vosburg, John Norwood, Barry Philbrook and John Bailey.

Racing began today with sailors who have not prequalified by wins at various regattas during the year taking part in an elimination series. Most of the Victorians, however, have qualified and took part in practice racing.

The championship, itself, will be raced on Saturday and Sunday.

Because this is the first nationals ever held, a special color scheme that smacks of Canadiana has been used for the boats that will be loaned to sailors who have pre-qualified outside British Columbia.

The boats, supplied by Hobie Cat manufacturers and Kits Marine, the local Hobie Cat dealer, have been dubbed Maple Rockets. Their white hulls have a red stripe with a red maple leaf set amidships. The sail is white and red and also carries a maple leaf. The trampoline is red.

Plans for Port Townsend's fourth annual Wooden Boat Festival next weekend are well under way, according to Paula Calderon, who is administrator for the Wooden Boat Foundation.

The festival, which will last from Friday Sept. 5 to the Sunday, will take place at Point Hudson Marina. More than 150 wooden craft, ranging from 130-foot barquentines to tiny prams will be on hand.

There will be scores of marine exhibitions, film and slide presentations, as well as classes and demonstrations on such topics as knots and ropework, the making and repairing of sails by hand, as well as nets; oar making, rigging, pattern making for bronze casting and other maritime crafts.

There will be boat tours, rowing and sailing regattas and Vancouver's Small Ship Society, brain child of the late Les Alfreds, will stage a mock sea battle, using Sabot dinghies cleverly converted into brigantines.

There will be a square dance on the Friday night and international performer Louis Killen will give a special concert on the Saturday evening.

From the Monday to the Friday following the festival — that is, Sept. 8-12 — the foundation will hold its third annual wooden boat symposium at nearby Fort Worden State Park.

Veteran boat builders and designers will give seven hours per day of intensive classes and workshops on the construction of wooden boats. There will also be student-faculty forums and additional evening programs for a maximum of 250 students.

Those taking part will receive a full set of plans for a 28-foot Monk-designed wooden sailboat. For details on tuition and accommodations contact Paula at the Point Hudson Marina. The phone number is (206) 385-3628 and the zip code, 98368.

Things are also well under way for Victoria's own third annual Classic Boat Festival in the Inner Harbor this weekend. Most of the boats will be assembled there by this evening.

One exception will be the 101-foot schooner Adventuress, which will be taking part in the festival for the first time. She has a history as intriguing as that of any boat on this coast. She was built in Maine in 1913 for John Borden of Chicago at a cost of $50,000. She was built for an Arctic trophy hunting expedition.

The San Francisco Bar Pilots bought her in 1914 and for 37 years she served as a pilot ship off the San Francisco Bar, substaining a number of mishaps and modifications, including the shortening of her masts.

She substained a fire in 1915 but the pilots thought so much of her they had her rebuilt. Their pocket books, however, weren't lined well enough to replace the luxurious below-deck fittings.

Doc Freeman bought her in 1950 and took her to Seattle. In 1959 she was acquired by Youth Adventure Inc., which uses her to train youngsters boat handling, safety afloat and the traditions of the sea.

If you have an old-timer you'd like to see in the festival you still have time to enter says Jim Russell of the Victoria Real Estate Board, who are sponsoring the festival.

Highlights for onshore watchers will be a one-hour concert by the Naden band, which takes place Saturday at noon and concerts by various musical groups that will follow until 5 p.m. Between 11 and 11:30 a.m. on Sunday there will be a sailpast with honorary commodore Frank Fredette taking the salute aboard HMCS Oriole.

Members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club will spend Saturday, Sunday and Monday enjoying the beauty of Spider Lake, which is near Horne Lake, past Qualicum Beach. Fred Potter is arranging this sortie and can be reached at 652-2446.

Taiwan proves too much for Trail to handle

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Taiwan hit a record seven home runs, including two in one inning by 5-foot-10 pitcher Sheng-Dean Chen to defeat Trail 23-0 Thursday in the semifinals of the Little League baseball World Series.

Taiwan advanced to the final Saturday and a shot at a fourth straight title and its ninth in 12 years. Taiwan's opponent will be Tampa, Fla., which thrashed Kirkland, Wash., 16-0 Thursday.

Yachts have a day off

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Clipper sails against Freedom today in America's Cup defender trials while France 3 and Australia have the day off during the final round in their battle for the challenger's role.

France 3 and Australia were to have started a best-of-seven series to decide which 12-metre will meet the New York Yacht Club's defender in the finals beginning Sept. 16. But the French asked for a lay day because of the death Wednesday of skipper Bruno Trouble's father.

Glen Meadows golfer takes third

RICHMOND (CP) — Darrell Dunn, 15, of Vancouver won the B.C. Golf Association's junior "B" championship Wednesday with a two-day total of 148.

Colin Young, 16, of Prince George was second with a score of 151 while John Fram, 14, of Glen Meadows in North Saanich was third at 152.

Mel Nelson scattered five hits and Bob Bugslag doubled home Tim Galavan with the winning run as Victoria Athletics blanked Tally-Ho Inn 1-0 in the fifth and deciding semi-final game Thursday at Central Park.

Loser Larry Cole allowed only three hits but two of them came in the fourth inning. Galavan doubled with one out, went to third on a sacrifice by Lou Vermette and scored on the double by Bugslag.

First two games of the final go at 4 and 6 p.m. Saturday at Central Park.

Bies to compete at Glen Meadows

The Open will be played at Glen Meadows with a pro-am scheduled for Sept. 10 and the 72-hole, $35,000 event to run Sept. 11-14.

A veteran of the Professional Golfers' Association tour, Bies was a tour regular in the 1960s and early '70s and still enters several major tournaments each year.

He finished fifth in the 1968 U.S. Open behind Lee Trevino, Jack Nicklaus, Bert Yancey and Bobby Nichols.

In making the announcement of Bies' entry, Glen Meadows pro Bill Penny confirmed that Stan Leonard, another U.S. tour great and a five-time winner of the B.C. Open, will play in the pro-am.

Penny said he is still waiting for confirmation on Dan Halldorson of Brandon, winner of more than $70,000 on the U.S. tour this year, and a celebrity guest from Hollywood.

Vantreight confident; seeks Cup win for dad

"I'm ready and I'm going to win."

So said a confident Gerry Vantreight in discussing the readiness of his super-modified for the 20th annual Daffodil Cup race for super-modified and sprint cars Saturday night at Western Speedway.

Time trials start at 6:30 p.m.

"We've got the Strawberry Cup, now I'd like to win the Daffodil Cup for dad (Bob Vantreight, Gerry's head mechanic and main provider). They're the big ones and on his home track."

Vantreight will have plenty of competition for the prestigious Daffodil race as the top Washington Racing Association drivers and several of the main Canadian American Modified Racing Association drivers are expected to turn out.

The race is particularly important to WRA drivers because president Rebel Jackson of Seattle has made it a points race and because of the closeness of the standings it could very well decide the points championship.

Gordon Stewart of Lynwood, Wash., currently leads the WRA chase with 514 points but Ross Fontes is close behind with 483, Evertt Koch of Federal Way has 380, Darrel Lopeman of Maple Valley, Wash., has 374 and Jackson has 362.

Vantreight is eighth with 192 points, despite having competed in only seven events this season.

Jan Sneva attempted to qualify for the Indianapolis 500 this season, Blaine was the Daffodil winner in 1977 and McLeod in 1973.

Vantreight feels White is the man to beat if his slick rear-engine machine is in top working order.

But Vantreight, who won the Strawberry Cup last year, has no intention of letting this Daffodil Cup get away from him.

He had been having magneto problems.

"We tried a couple of new ones but that didn't help. So we borrowed Ian's (Ian Vantreight) and whoosh."

Region throws block

Tillicum can't expand

The Capital Regional District passed a bylaw at a special meeting Thursday that will stop Saanich from allowing the proposed Tillicum shopping centre to expand to 450,000 square feet without regional board approval.

Directors voted 31-21 for a bylaw that restricts any regional centre or major district centre to 295,000 square feet.

The decision came after lengthy debate and some hot exchanges with board chairman Jim Campbell ruling Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier out of order on more than one occasion.

The bylaw was given all but its final reading earlier this year but had to lay in abeyance until litigation was completed.

Mr. Justice John Bouck handed down his judgment Wednesday, ruling that Saanich's action April 24 in lifting a covenant that restricted the shopping centre to 295,000 square feet was illegal because no rezoning public hearing had been held on the proposed expansion.

In his judgment, Bouck said: "The exact rule as to what is or is not good or bad faith seems to depend upon the precise factual problem in dispute. It is clear no member of Saanich council was going to receive any personal benefit by reason of the resolution of 24 April 1980.

"Yet, this resolution is tainted with an appearance of impropriety. After many months of bickering Saanich knew it had committed itself both to the public and the regional district that Tillicum would not exceed 295,000 square feet.

"That being so, why not call another public hearing and explain the reason for the change? Failure to do so gives the impression Saanich was attempting to avoid earlier representations. That is enough to make its actions condemned as having been carried out in bad faith."

The vote was 33-19 against when Saanich Ald. Howard Sturrock failed to get the matter tabled until Sept. 3.

"I really resent being stampeded the day after the judgment was handed down. There is nothing that can happen for at least 10 days," he said.

He and Couvelier said it would take that long to prepare for another public hearing on the expansion.

Couvelier wanted to make a compromise proposal once the bylaw was passed.

He wanted the regional district to call a hearing within 30 days to hear the developer, Cal Investments Ltd.

Ald. Bob Wright of Victoria said the time for compromise is over.

Ruling Couvelier out of order because the proposal was not on the agenda of the special meeting, Campbell said it was not proper for the board to instruct its staff to organize such a hearing.

After the bylaw received approval, Couvelier said he was disappointed.

TOWN TALK

All that huffing and puffing dished up by the weatherman Wednesday afternoon produced a windfall for one elderly shopper at the Fairways store at Gorge and Tillicum.

Parking space was at a premium and Town Talk's Man-on-the-Scene waited while the elderly shopper headed for his car. Suddenly, a variety of bills, mostly 20s, appeared from nowhere. The elderly gent scooped most of them up.

By his actions, the money did not appear to belong to him. He jumped into his car, gleefully displayed the find — which appeared to be more than $100 — to his wife, and started to pull out.

He stopped suddenly, spotted another $20 and a fiver, which his wife recovered from under the nose of TT's disappointed — and slow-moving — agent.

Unfortunately, we neglected to get the gentleman's licence number, and that won't help the loser, who may be wondering what happened to his money.

Fred Jeffries of Denver, Colorado, made a sentimental journey down Douglas Street this week and he did it on foot.

It was 33 years ago that he was last in Victoria, at the head of a parade by the crew of a U.S. destroyer.

"I remember we marched eight miles (12 kilometres) that day. There have been a lot of changes since 1947 but it's as beautiful here as ever. Possibly more beautiful."

He expects to be a regular visitor, having organized tours from Colorado into the Victoria-Vancouver area.

Some new potential nominees for Town Talk's semi-occasional Award for Buck Passing have surfaced in downtown Victoria . . . but everyone thinks the other guy should accept the nomination.

On hand to present the award is 10-year-old Zoe Rushforth, of 1748 Llandaff Place in Gordon Head, who won the Fancy Dress Competition on Victoria Day.

She said in a recent letter to the editor she'd covered herself with burnt cork, wore sooty clothes, carried a chimney sweep brush and won the Market Square event in May.

However, all that effort went for naught. Although a man told her the prize would be mailed, it never came.

"I don't think I'll enter next year if they aren't going to keep their promises about the prizes," Zoe's letter concluded.

The Market Square Merchants' Association disclaimed reponsibility, as did most everyone else.

So who is responsible? The Victoria Day Celebration Society? Bill Bennett? The Russians?

Someone phoned Zoe's mom and said it was the Canadiana Costume Society, wherever they may be.

One has to wonder who they'll blame next. Good luck Zoe.

We heard complaints this week that city hall wasn't releasing to callers the names or phone numbers of members of the police commission.

"What have they got to hide?" asked one citizen.

Enter Mayor Bill Tindall, chairman of the police board, who ordered the practice stopped on Thursday.

The list now is available on request.

Of course, we can't forget Tindall either. His home number is 598-2451.

Many of the complaints arose out remarks made by board members over the police contract negotiations which were settled last week after a summer-long police job action, a spokesman for the mayor's office said.

Seems city hall was anxious to protect the board members from nasty callers.

On the other hand, where was the protection for citizens with valid complaints?

Now both sides will be able to go at it, ear-to-ear, if not face-to-face.

Self-styled city watchdog Joe Richards wants city council to record meetings on tape and Mayor Bill Tindall says he'll think about it.

The two were, however, quite a bit apart on the estimated cost of a recording system.

Richards told council Thursday night it would make good sense to spend $150 on a recording system, considering it could save the city hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal costs.

"With a recording system you'll always know exactly who said what, and it would also assist the clerk," Richards said.

The mayor replied that the Capital Regional Board recently installed a recording system at a cost of about $8,000, but that he would give the matter some thought.

Dunhelm cleared to build

After years of controversy over numerous development proposals for a 2.5-acre parcel of land in James Bay, the way has finally been cleared for a 33-unit townhouse project.

Plans for Dunhelm Village, to be built at Boyd and Luxton, were approved Thursday night by Victoria city council following a public hearing.

Charles Ball of the James Bay Residents' League told council the developer had shown an admirable willingness to co-operate with the neighborhood.

He said the design was the result of numerous meetings between the developer and residents.

"I'd just like to say that this project has the overwhelming support of the community. This is an outstanding example of co-operation between the community and a developer."

In other business, council decided to include the Inner Harbor area in the zone in which time-share or interval occupancy ownership is permitted.

This means that Victoria developer and former Social Credit cabinet minister Sam Bawlf can go ahead with his plans of renting suites in his new Wharf Street condominium on a short-term basis.

Bawlf sold the 50 suites of the luxury waterfront condominium to individual investors, assuring them in a prospectus that they would be able to rent them to visitors on a weekly or monthly basis.

Fair to open early Saturday

The 112th annual Saanichton fair opens at 8 a.m. Saturday and continues through the Labor Day holiday on Monday.

The fair features Highland dancing and old-time fiddling on Saturday, and events and exhibitions during the three-day celebration include performing bands, farm animals, flower and fruit exhibits, 4-H Clubs, household arts, winemaking, foods and farm games.

The cost is $2 per person but three-day tickets are available for $4.50. Proceeds are channelled back into the fairgrounds.

This year's fair will be a different one for Saanich-and-the-Islands MLA and finance minister Hugh Curtis.

Instead of staying in his booth waiting for visitors to drop in, his constituency office said Thursday Curtis will go out to meet the people by roaming the fairgrounds, renewing acquaintances, stopping to talk, listening to the concerns of the people and answering questions.

The Tories, the NDP and the Socialist Party of Canada are also traditionally represented at the fair.

Drivers face charges as crackdown starts

Colwood RCMP will be out in force over the holiday weekend cracking down on drinking drivers in the western communities.

Officers started their roving roadblocks overnight and, using the Batvan — the breathalyzer-analysis testing van — stopped 475 vehicles between 7:30 p.m. and 2:30 a.m.

Five motorists were charged with drinking driving offences, another with refusing to provide a breath sample, and four others were given 24-hour roadside suspensions when their blood alcohol readings were below the .08 legal limit.

Two motorists were caught driving while their licences were suspended, four received tickets for minor traffic violations and 18 got warnings.

The Batvan team will be on the road again tonight at unspecified locations.

And police throughout B.C. will be out in full force over the weekend in an accident prevention program, the transportation and attorney-general's ministries said Thursday.

Aircraft patrols, road checks, breath analysis testing vehicles and radar will be used to check holiday traffic.

The statement said the government is concerned about the increased number of traffic deaths on holiday weekends and the fact that people are complacently accepting those deaths.

The statement urges motorists to report any criminal or impaired driving behavior to police.

Send the teachers to the students

Spiralling university costs in inflation-ridden Britain are worrying developing Commonwealth countries which send so many of their students there, says Rubymay Parrott of the Saanich Peninsula school board.

And there is a strong school of thought which says the flow should be reversed and educators sent to the students in these countries.

Parrott, president of the Canadian School Trustees Association, was one of a 16-strong Canadian delegation that attended the eighth Commonwealth Education Conference in Colombo, the capital of Srilanka, formerly Ceylon.

"Their main concern was the increase in costs of university education," Parrott said in an interview. "The emphasis in the developing countries is still on a university education. They're trying very hard to develop technical schools in their own areas."

But Parrott said delegates from the 43 countries represented at the conference agreed that sending students abroad for a university education is not the best answer for developing countries.

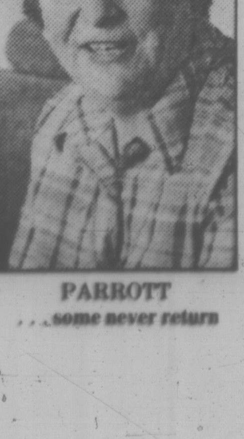
She says Canada offers 300 scholarships a year for students from Commonwealth countries. The scholarships cover tuition and living expenses.

She says the conference agreed it would be better to have experts go to developing countries.

"It's better to send experts to show them how to print their own books and teach equipment manufacturing and, eventually, develop their own situation or industry on-site with an education system ranging from kindergarten through and including university," she says.

While in Srilanka, Parrott visited schools, which she describes as "almost open-air pavilions with a roof and walls — no windows — and the desks out there in the open."



PARROTT
. . . some never return

Through Barbara Gunasekera, the principal of a school for 4,000 girls, Parrott received an invitation to visit a school for 7,000 boys. A show case school in the nation's capital, its students are drawn half from the surrounding area. Half the students were sons of the school's graduates.

She was asked to explain the Canadian education system to an assembly of 1,300 boys.

"They sat there without the slightest movement, just rapt attention," Parrott says.

The school's motto is Learn or Depart, reflecting the tenacity with which the country's youngsters absorb what education they can.

Teaching is not a lucrative profession in Srilanka. A starting teacher gets 500 rupees a month, a graduate teacher 775 while principals earn 4,000 rupees a month. Considering that 675 rupees represents $50, stipends are anything but generous.

While everybody speaks English, Parrott says there is great emphasis on the country's language and culture.

"There were 40 bands in the grounds playing for the opening," she says. "They were the best bands and entertainment I've ever seen school kids put on."

Centre leaps final obstacle

The proposed $8 million Wharf Street convention centre made it over the final hurdle Thursday.

Victoria city council approved an application for a development permit, giving the Provincial Capital Commission pdermission to call for tenders on the controversial waterfront project.

The only thing that could still stop the project is lack of financing, but Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, who is in charge of the capital commission, recently reassured the city funds will be available.

Aldermen John Cooper, Gretchen Brewin and Robin Blencoe were the only ones opposing the motion to approve the development permit application.

Cooper said he was stunned that council would commit itself to this project without knowing how the annual deficit would be financed and who would operate the centre.

"This is utter nonsense, tommyrot," he said.

By JOHN GOUDAS

"It's become a battle of locations," says the patriarch of General Hospital, John Beradino, after 18 years of playing Dr. Steve Hardy.

Like prime-time dramas, the soaps venture outside stage sets to remain fresh. The Hospital crew leads the pack in this category traveling to cover Luke's "wedding" aboard a yacht. A few days later, on a Sunday in Los Angeles, the company worked 22 hours inside Bullock's Wilshire department store where Luke and Laura spent a night cavorting.

General Hospital hasn't cut corners this summer. The juicy Luke-Laura romance, beginning with the rape some months ago, is being milked to the hilt, yet it's responsible for Hospital leading the field, drawing large rating shares.

Beradino has never been so bullish on the soap opera trade. "We are beginning to have super-stars in the afternoon," John said. "And we're starting to see piracy taking place. One soap stealing stars from another. I even think we are ready for a late night soap opera five times a week against Johnny Carson. This will knock Carson out of the box."

Does it sound like big John Beradino is getting senile, or nipping in the afternoon? Neither one. He merely sees the soap boom continuing.

So far the man has logged 4,800 shows since April 1, 1963, but must travel to Australia to see any reruns. Can you imagine what the ex-second baseman in the major leagues would get if re-runs surfaced here? "I'd settle for $100 a week," says John.

Beradino seldom visits the L.A. Dodger or California Angel ball parks these days. He prefers to watch ball games galore via TV. What he sees does not impress him.

"The ball is livelier now than it was in my day." (John played in the '40s with the St. Louis Browns and the Cleveland Indians).

Despite his critical view of his former profession, John still enjoys the game, but his biggest pleasure is the tremendous success of General Hospital.

Channel Chatter: Marie Cheatham (Stephanie Wyatt on Search for Tomorrow) will be in Houston on September 8, for a sentimental commemorative honoring her mom, one of the first women pilots. Marie will award the Bette Lou Cheatham Memorial Scholarship to a lucky young woman in the field of aviation.

Maybe you noticed All My Children's Taylor Miller (Nina Cortlandt) wearing her hair in a side part or perhaps wondered about the rather large cut on Josh Taylor's nose (Chris Kositchek on Days of Our Lives). Well, the twosome met the first time recently at one of Harriet Ebstein's Soap Stars on the Mall events. Apparently they hit it off so well and were laughing so hard that they suffered a fall. Ms Miller came out of the mishap with big bump on her head, while Josh ended up with a gashed nose.

The producers of NBC's Saturday Night Live (who are recasting the entire show) were so impressed with Marsha Clark's (Hillary Bauer on Guiding Light) stand-up comedy act at New York's "Improvisation" that they gave this talented lady a screen test. Marsha is considered to be one of the front-runners to land a spot on the show . . .

Texas oilman Jack Grimm is spending high to get pictures of what may or may not be the S.S. Titanic, but underwater explorer Jacques Cousteau says Grimm is being had. "A crazy Texas millionaire is putting a lot of money in a hoax," Cousteau told reporters in Quebec. And even if it isn't a hoax, Cousteau adds, "Why would anybody try to raise a ship in 10,000 feet of water? It's just a lot of scrap metal.'

In U.S. federal court in Manhattan, Judge Gerard Goettel ruled against actress-singer Ann-Margret in an invasion of privacy suit she brought against High Society magazine. But the judge complimented her on her taste for having been offended by the publication, which he described as "tacky." Goettel dismissed the suit in which the actress said her privacy had been invaded by High Society's publication of pictures of her, including one from the 1978 movie Magic, in which she appears partially nude.

Relatives of ailing singer Kate Smith are accusing each other in a courtroom of imprisoning the 73-year-old performer in her retirement home. Miss Smith, a radio star in the 1930s and once regarded an American favorite with her rendition of God Bless America, will not be called as a witness. Unable to walk without assistance, she is living in Raleigh, N.C., suffering from arteriosclerosis, diabetes and cancer. The charges came during a court fight over a joint conservatorship to handle the singer's finanacial affairs.

A dozen stars, from Mickey Rooney to Sandy Duncan, joined more than 1,000 other union members in a demonstration and march down Broadway to support the striking Screen Actors Guild. Among the other stars at the rally, which began in front of the Columbus Circle offices of Paramount Pictures, were Jason Robards, Martin Balsam, Tony Roberts, Jack Warden, Eli Wallach, Richard Kiley and Ann Jackson.

Dear Abby:

Have you ever considered running for president? I'm serious. I think you'd be perfect for the job, and what's more, I'll bet you could win. Say the word and I'll make the first campaign contribution.

Your Fan

Dear Fan:

Thanks for the compliment as well as the vote of confidence, but I don't know how my husband would feel about being the "first laddie."

Dear Abby:

My finance and I are planning to be married in a few months. We found a perfect spot in the mountains where the ceremony could be held in clean air, under the trees, near a lovely stream. Both of us are lovers of nature and the outdoors.

When we tried to find a minister in the area, we were disappointed to learn that most of them were only vacationers and would be gone long before the wedding would take place. Then we heard about a forest ranger who has the legal right to perform marriage ceremonies, although he is not a minister. We contacted him and he agreed to perform the ceremony.

The trouble started when we took my mother and grandmother to meet this ranger. They were appalled to find that he had long hair and a beard. They also objected to the fact that he isn't a "real" minister.

Abby, it doesn't matter to us who performs the marriage ceremony as long as it's legal. (Neither of us is religious.) What is your opinion?

A Happy Couple

Dear Happy:

Have the long-haired ranger tie the knot and don't worry about what your mother and grandmother think. Perhaps you could remind them that Jesus Christ had long hair and a beard.

Dear Abby:

Have you any words of comfort or advice for a woman who is the same age as her husband but is often mistaken for his mother?

That is my problem. My husband always has been extremely young-looking. He has a lean build, a full head of hair and a boyish grin.

I have always had a weight problem. (I'm about 50 pounds overweight.) My hair started to turn gray when I was in my late 20s, but friends tell me it's "becoming."

I have to dress matronly because they don't make smart, youthful clothes in my size. What can I do besides feel sorry for myself?

Looks Old

Dear Looks:

Enlist the help of Overeaters Anonymous, TOPS, Weight Watchers or your friendly family physician and get your figure down to where it should be! For every 20 pounds you lose, you will look 10 years younger! And quit apologizing for your "matronly" wardrobe. If you can't find smart, youthful styles in your size, make some!

A new look at old age

By DANIEL DROLET

This group of smiling seniors has developed ways of coping with getting older.

QUEBEC (CP) — On one South Pacific island there's a society that doesn't tolerate old people. When a man is suspected of getting old, he's taken out and made to climb a coconut tree.

The others then gather around the tree and begin shaking it. If the man falls, possibly to his death, he's too old.

It was with that example by Professor David Danon of Isreal's Weizmann Institute that the ninth international conference on social gerontology, the study of old age, opened this week with 900 delegates from 30 countries in attendance.

One of the ways older people adapt to difficult situations is by making the environment adapt to them, David Schonfield, a psychiatry professor at the University of Calgary, told the conference.

Schonfield noted that the older one becomes, the more difficult it is acquire new skills — like learning a new language. Because it is more difficult for them to learn, older people will do things like insist on speaking their native language in places where it is normally not used.

"One might also compensate for deficiencies by employing an interpreter, for instance. Or, one might avoid the problem altogether, shunning cities where inhabitants use a different tongue.

"Paradoxically, it can be said that refusing to adapt is itself a sign of adaptibility, although that may be labelled as rigidity, especially when it is the younger groups who are doing the labelling."

Schonfield, whose presentation followed two papers on the biological aspects of aging, also said that often, the eccentric older person is the successful older person.

"Social writ does not reign supreme as we get older, and sins of omission or avoidance cease being sins.

"Owning a car may have become Western society's modal custom, but studies show that after the age of 45, people usually drive their automobiles at night much less frequently," he said, calling someone's stubborn refusal to drive at night "an admirable adaptation to poor dark vision."

Older people also adapt to their increasingly limited physical capabilities by lowering their standards and expectations.

"Someone who could run a mile in four or five minutes at the age of 20 is delighted at the age of 60 to be able to run a mile at any speed."

The best way to adapt to aging, Schonfield said, is to develop the ability to foresee and prepare — and not to minimize the fact that we will change as we age. Minimizing them "brings with it the danger thatindividuals who experience age-related deficiencies will consider these abnormal signs."

"If we are told that sexual performance does not normally decrease in the later years, the middle-aged man who experiences just one instance of impotence may become so upset that chronic impotence can ensue."

On the other hand, he warned, "accentuating difficulties brigns the danger of self-fulfilling prophecies."

Another speaker at the conference, Dr. Victor W. Marshall, told delegates that with the proportion of non-productive old people in Western societies steadily growing, the stage may soon be set for a serious conflict between the generations.

Marshall, a behavioral scientist from the University of Toronto, said that the proportion of old people in Canadian society will climb in 50 years to about 20 per cent of the population from the present nine per cent.

The cost of supporting this new class of old people, most of whom will likely not be working members of society, will fall to a relatively small number of working people.

Some have argued that the increase in the number of non-productive pensioners will be counterbalanced by a drop in the number of children the working members of society will have to support, Marshall said.

Others say that as the number of elderly increases, age will become irrelevant and conflict between generations will be lessened.

Marshall rejects both these arguments.

"If the aged are viewed as a growing group set off from the rest of society precisely through their position as consumers rather than providers of resources, then it must be admitted that at least serious potential for generational conflict exists."

Conflict between the generations can be likened to a class struggle, Marshall said, with the powers-that-be trying to keep the potential conflict under wraps by keeping the elderly divided among themselves.

And he quoted a study showing this was already happening in France, where the gap between the rich and the poor widens in retirement.

"State-fostered ideology can act to pacify the aged, thereby reducing the potential for social conflict between the generations," he said.

The image of retirement being promoted in that country is individualistic and "failure of the working class to attain satisfaction in retirement is defined as personal failure to adequately prepare for retirement."

But poorer workers are victims of society because they generally don't have the resources to plan an adequate retirement, he said.

"Blaming the victim serves to divide the classes in retirement, just as they have been divided during the working years," adding that studies of Canadian social policy have shown it to be similar in approach to France's.

Marshall also said the promotion of early retirement may serve an economic function in times of high unemployment by reducing the number of people in the work force.

But retiring early can leave people poverty-stricken and dependent on government help, which in turn leads the elderly to have a greater stake in the stability of the government which is providing them with an income.

The conference, which has drawn together 900 participants from 30 countries, continues today with workshops discussing women and aging.

CAT scanner a medical breakthrough

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

I heard from my sister that she had a CAT scan. I've heard the term before, but am not sure what it means or how it works. My sister is confused, too. Does it imply something serious?

Mrs. G.R.D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

Most people who hear the term "CAT scan" are as confused as you. The letters CAT stand for "computerized axial tomography."

The CAT scanner represents one of the great advances in modern medicine and science. It is a brilliant marriage of engineering techniques and medical science. The combination of computers and X-ray techniques now makes it possible to learn details that formerly were hidden in the deep recesses of the body.

The CAT scan is a painless procedure which takes a short time to complete. The portion of the body that is being examined is subjected to X-rays. Detectors, placed on the outside of the body, are then able to show the amount of X-rays that has been absorbed by the body tissues that are being studied. These findings are then fed into a computer and the data that is collected serves to pinpoint hidden problems in the body and brain.

CAT scan is particularly useful in detecting growths, tumors, cysts and inflammation of various "hidden" organs of the body. It is accepted that the scanner has revolutionized the diagnostic capabilities of modern medicine.

The scanner has been able to elicit vital information from the lungs, kidneys, pancreas, liver, spleen and brain. It can even be of critical value to the eye surgeon because of its ability to locate tumors or other conditions in the back of the eye.

Prior to the development of the CAT scanner, complex — and sometimes distressing — techniques were used for the visualization of the brain. A procedure by which air was injected into the spinal canal and into the recesses of the brain has now been virtually eliminated.

The use of myelograms to study tumors in the spinal canal has also been almost totally replaced by the scanner.

There was a time when it was necessary to do an exploratory operation in order to find a hidden source of trouble. Many such exploratory procedures have now become unnecessary because of the CAT scanner.

Many people to whom a CAT scan is suggested become unnecessarily frightened because they believe that it inevitably means that they are doomed by a dangerous illness.

Actually, the CAT scanner is a diagnostic marvel which should hold no more terror than any other routine examination.

An odd little battle

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Two men who each claim to be the world's smallest man are competing for the attention of midway visitors at the Kentucky State Fair.

Ricki Donovan, 29, stands just 36 inches tall and sits in a midway exhibit billing him as the "world's smallest man." Down the crowded lane from his exhibit sits Pete Moore, 48, whose body is shorter at 28 inches.

"Yes, Pete is smaller," sighs Donovan's manager.

Organizers of the state fair said a booking error apparently resulted in having two men both claiming to be the "world's smallest man."

Moore takes the double booking in stride. "He's trying to make a living just like me. There's plenty of business for both of us."

Moore, who weighs 38 pounds — only 32 when the weather is hot, sits in his exhibit as people willing to pay 25-cents file past to see him.

Donovan, who weighs in at 75 pounds, has been on the carnival circuit since last year. He uses his road show income to pay his way through the University of Minnesota, where he is studying accounting.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

My parents have always given me a lot of freedom but recently things have changed. I have just graduated from Grade 12 and in one month will be 18. At this age I feel I have the right to choose the path I wish to follow.

In the fall, I wish to attend the University of British Columbia. But my parents say I must go to a Bible school in Quebec for one year. I feel that taking a year out of my schooling may be detrimental to my education and many school counsellors agree. I have told my parents that I have the right to choose my own educational path, but they say that they were put on earth for my guidance. This is true, however, "guidance" is making suggestions, not giving orders. Am I right or wrong?

I love my parents very much and I don't want to hurt their feelings. But I also don't want to be forced into anything just because of their feelings.

Answer:

Your parents were not "put on earth" to dictate to you, nor to do your choosing for you.

There are some circumstances in which you might decide to accept your parents' direction in detail as a matter of conscience, even if you were not keen on doing what they wanted. In your present case, you do not seem to be prepared to do that, nor do I think you should.

You must take care, however, before you act directly contrary to your parents, that you count the cost. First, are you prepared to break with them, if necessary, on this matter? Finally, are you prepared to assume the cost of your own education?

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am an 18-year-old female with a problem I cannot seem to figure out. Ever since I was 13 years old, I have been bothered by men (some are married).

I cannot walk to the store in peace before someone comes up to talk, and the funny thing about it is I just don't know them. I try to ignore them but it just doesn't seem to help. I have isolated myself by staying inside my home.

My parents say that they are going to put them before the police. I was forced to buy a wedding band to ward them off. If these men continue to bother me I'm going to get married, and very soon. Is this the right approach to the problem?

Answer:

I'll assume that you are pretty, because — unfairly — pretty girls seem to attract more attention (bees to honey). I'll also make the assumption that you are not doing anything — consciously or not — to "invite" these passes, or that you are not misinterpreting some harmless friendly statements made to you. Finally, I trust that what you are complaining about is not something you really do want.

Staying at home or legal action is not going to improve the basic situation.

Also, it's a rotten reason to get married.

You are going to have to learn to put up with these hassles. If you can't laugh at them, or discourage them with a curt phrase ("Down, boy!"), or angry look (even better is a totally bored look), or ignore them and carry on with your endeavors, then I have run out of suggestions. If all fails, and you continue to feel oppresssed, then it may be useful to see a (female) psychotherapist to clarify an oversimplified dilemma.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am a 16-year-old girl going out with an 18-year-old boy. We both love each other very much. The problem is my father.

My boyfriend is at present in jail and will be out within the next two weeks. He's only in on a small charge and has only been there for two months. I have stood by waiting.

My father and mother and I have always kept a very good relationship and I cannot lie to them. I'm pretty sure my mother understands my feelings.

I want to go on seeing my boyfriend but if I do I'm afraid I might lose my father's trust and friendship. How can I go on seeing my boyfriend and keep my father, too?

Answer:

Your relationship with your parents sound likes a wonderful one, and is worth keeping. I am sure that your father wants the best for you and has high hopes for you in terms of the person that you might ultimately marry.

I am sure that it is difficult for him to understand your feelings for someone who is doing time in jail. Even though it may be a small charge, most parents would like their children to know and like people who avoid trouble with the law. There may be circumstances that your father is not familar with, and in this regard perhaps you mother could help you in talking with your father.

If you have to choose, I would certainly recommend keeping the close relationship you have with your parents.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I have a strange problem and that is that I'm 19 and don't have a period. It started about three years ago for a month, then it disappeared for two years then it was six months later.

The biggest problem is that I am totally terrified about doctors no matter what sex they are. Even having a friend along doesn't help for it really doesn't give me any courage.

I feel no pain and all anybody says is that I'm nuts and should see a doctor. The last time I went to a doctor (1½ years ago), I fainted in his office. What should I do?

Answer:

Being fearful of doctors to the point of fainting must have been caused by a terrible experience in your early childhood, which has carried over. Fears are unreasonable and we cannot talk ourselves out of them.

When the fear involves your well-being you should get help in overcoming it. It is important that you be checked by a doctor. There are some women who menstruate irregularly and rarely.

But you are not willing to see a doctor to find out. This brings us back to your fear. You can be helped to overcome this at a counselling agency.

Youth's dungeon no game

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — While investigators were searching steam tunnels beneath Michigan State University last year for James Dallas Egbert III, the teenage computer whiz was trying to kill himself in a town far away, a close friend has told The Associated Press.

Egbert died Aug. 16 of a bullet wound in the head that police say was self-inflicted.

His death came almost a year after the month-long disappearance that became the subject of attention as police and Texas investigator William Dear speculated he had been trapped in a real-life version of the fantasy game Dungeons and Dragons.

Instead, the Huber Heights youth had botched a suicide attempt in New Orleans, and was living and working unaware of the stir.

The youth's parents, James and Anna Egbert, have confirmed a report in the New York Times and the story told in Dayton to The Associated Press by Egbert's 23-year-old Washington, D.C., friend, who asked to be identified only as David.

"We want to turn a tragic situation into something positive,". said the elder Egbert, who has set up a scholarship fund to establish a clinic for gifted children through Wright State University in Dayton.

The youth never disclosed his whereabouts for that month because he was interested in selling movie rights linking his disappearance to Dungeons and Dragons or another intellectual fantasy game, David said. Dear has also refused to reveal where he found Egbert, but had said the disappearance had no relation to the game.

David said he wanted to "demystify" the Egbert story to assure a movie would never be made.

"There really isn't anything movie-worthy about it," he said. "It is not sensational. It doesn't involve Dungeons and Dragons or anything weird like that. It was a different sort of life, but it was nothing worth writing about."

Fraud may clip coupons cold

TORONTO (CP) — Grocery coupon fraud is "getting so bad" in the United States that coupons may be banned altogether, says a Toronto consultant studying the problem for the International Circulation Managers' Association.

Ron Darragh said successful large-scale fraud is rare in Canada, but the epidemic U.S. problem is forcing newspapers there into costly controls in delivery of papers and disposal of unsold copies.

About 10 per cent of food coupons cashed in Canada are used fraudulently, the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada found three years ago after asking association members for their guesses.

Others estimate the rate of improper redemption is much lower. But even 10 per cent is well below the epidemic proportions reached in the U.S., where industry officials say fraud accounts for 15 to 40 per cent of every 100 coupons cashed.

Improper redemption probably costs U.S. manufacturers—and indirectly, the people who buy the products—about $200 million a year, said Sterling McKusik, a Minnesota postal inspector who co-ordinates coupon fraud investigations across the U.S.

Gordon Finlay, general manager of Nielsen Clearing House, a Toronto coupon-handling company hired by retailers and manufacturers, said there is an improper redemption rate in Canada of less than one coupon for every 100 cashed in — perhaps because it's much harder for Canadians with shady ethics to get their hands on enough coupons to make a venture into coupon crime worthwhile.

Canadian manufacturers issued only 1.6 billion coupons in 1979, compared with 81 billion in the U.S.

Only 26 per cent of Canadian coupons—compared with 77 per cent in the U.S. — were issued through newspapers, which could be bought in bulk or stolen for a mass harvest of coupons.

"It's not unusual for a 25-cent American newspaper to have $8 to $12 worth of coupons," said Finlay. "That could present an opportunity for quick profit, depending on how you do business."

How does coupon fraud work?

Coupons offer so many cents — the average in Canada is 22 to 23 cents, according to Nielsen Clearing House—off the purchase of a jar of coffee or bottle of shampoo or some other product.

Manufacturers issue the coupons, hoping to increase sales of their products. They promise to repay grocery stores the value of coupons turned in by grocery shoppers, plus an amount for handling them.

It's illegal to get money for a coupon unless the product identified on the coupon is actually bought. A 25-cent coupon for Totino's frozen pizza, for example, can't legally be redeemed if a shopper bought McCain's pizza — or no pizza at all.

Although coupon fraud always involves the purchase — or lack of it—of a product by an individual shopper, the crime isn't usually committed by the consumer.

Dishonest retailers, clearing house owners or crooks posing as store owners have far more to gain and create a much larger problem.

McKusik said grocery shoppers do sometimes hand coupons to store cashiers for products they don't buy, whether intentionally or unintentionally.

If the customer has a full cart and the order is already bagged, the cashier may not remember or check to see whether the shopper is trying to cash a Maxwell House coffee coupon for the purchase of Yuban.

"It's small potatoes and we really couldn't care less," said McKusik of this type of fraud.

But instances of wide-scale or organized coupon fraud have been growing with the boom in coupons issued, he said.

Some store employees clip coupons wherever they find them, and pocket money equal to the face value when they close up the cash register for the day, said McKusik.

Store owners find it even easier to collect coupons and submit them for redemption, along with those legitimately turned in by shoppers.

Some coupon crooks set up a fictitious store or buy a bankrupt store they'll never re-open, just for the money they can collect on coupons if they persuade manufacturers and clearing houses they're bona fide retailers.

Premarital sex on the upswing

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A recent report in Newsweek says almost half the 10.3 million women in the United States aged between 15 and 19 have had premarital sex.

Citing a report by two Johns Hopkins University professors, Melvin Zelnik and John Kantner, the magazine said the percentage has almost doubled since they began their modern sexuality surveys in 1971.

Newsweek said two major disturbing consequences of the trend toward earlier sexual activity were teenage pregnancy and venereal disease.

A 1977 study disclosed that 600,000 unwed teenagers were giving birth in the United States each year, with the sharpest increase among those under 14. Adolescents accounted for a quarter of the more than one million cases of gonorrhea reported in the U.S. each year.

Helmet fight pushed

Motorcyclists are still fighting the mandatory helmet ruling which was approved last week by the legislature.

Ken Patterson, a local member of the Motorcyclist Protection Association, said Thursday he would like to see a law which required helmets for motorcyclists under the age of 18 or with less than two years' riding experience.

"Figures from Statistics Canada tell us that the helmets are not doing what they are supposed to do," he said.

Patterson said the mandatory helmet law was passed in 1964 because the helmets were supposed to prevent fatalities.

"But according to Statistics Canada, fatalities rose in 1965, and have been rising ever since."

Patterson said this information is available to everybody, and that it was "sheer ignorance" on the legislature's part for passing the mandatory ruling.

He said the attorney-general ministry informed him it obtained its statistics from the motor vehicle branch, but the branch told him it had not received requests for this information.

"I've been fighting this ruling for about four years now, and I'll continue to fight it. I'm facing a five-day jail sentence for failure to pay a fine I got for not wearing a helmet."

Patterson said motorcycle drivers' tests are too easy, and that more instruction should be required for novice motorcyclists.

Open house set at Hebrew school

Victoria's historic synagogue, Congregation Emanuel, will hold a Hebrew school open house and registration Sept. 7 at 10 a.m. at the synagogue school, 610 Fort.

Members of the Jewish community are invited to bring their children and families.

Teachers this year include Brian Green, a senior at the University of Victoria, and director of B.C.'s Camp Hatikvah; Shana Lerman, a former director of teen programs at the Jewish Community Centre of San Diego, Calif.

Further information about the Hebrew school is available by calling Jon Sector, chairman of the education committee at 477-6887, or Rabbi Harvey Markowitz at 382-0615.

Cadet wins German trip

Cadet Harold Miller, 15, of Victoria's 2483 Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Cadet Corps, has been chosen to take part in the Germany exchange program next summer.

He has just completed a six-week cadet leader instructor course at the Vernon Army Cadet Camp.

Cadet Cory Zelinsky of Thunder Bay, Ont., received the Sword of Honor Award for being chosen best cadet.

John Michael Vaux, 2037 Linda Place, pleaded guilty to failing to disclose an asset and fraudulently disposing of property in 1978.

Crown counsel Digby Kier of the federal justice department in Vancouver told the court Vaux took out a $7,222 loan from the Bank of Montreal on June 3, 1977, to purchase a $13,500 boat.

Vaux declared bankruptcy on Jan. 5, 1978, but made no mention of $4,222 which was still outstanding on his loan. Kier said Vaux sold the vessel through Canoe Cove Yacht Sales on March 22, 1978, for his purchase price, receiving $8,400 in cash and the remainder of the $13,500 with another boat. Kier said Vaux received $7,560 in cash on the transaction.

The second boat, Kier said, was sold for $4,500 in June of 1979.

Kier said Vaux had been convicted July 14, 1971, in Vancouver of fraud and was fined $1,000, given a nominal, one-day jail term and placed on two years probation.

Ostler allowed Vaux to remain free and reserved sentence until Oct. 8.

One of two brothers received a total of 60 days in jail while the other was given a suspended sentence.

Thomas Morris Beck, 19, of 860 Royal Oak, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand March 15 and driving while under suspension and public mischief Aug. 9.

Crown counsel Clinton Kittle said Beck was stopped March 15 behind the wheel of his van with the engine running. He was taken back to the Saanich police station for breath tests but refused after giving only one sample. Kittle said Beck was on probation at the time.

On Aug. 9, Kittle continued, Beck was involved in a near-accident in the 3300-block Tennyson shortly after 11 p.m. on his motorbike. Police learned that Beck, who suffered minor injuries in the incident, was under a six-month suspension handed out in Duncan provincial court May 9. In addition, he was on two sets of probation at the time and gave officers a false name.

Ostler handed out consecutive sentences of 30 and five days for the impaired driving and refusal counts and 10 and 15 days for the driving while suspended and public mischief charges.

Kittle said Beck was apparently having trouble with a van and needed to jump-start the vehicle. He broke a window at Marquette Service, 3597 Shelbourne, ostensibly to get a pair of jumper cables but took the $212.21 cash float while he was in the premises. The money was found stashed in the spare tire of the van by Saanich police.

Defence lawyer Fredric Bronson said his client denied going into the garage to get the jumper cable. He said Beck was after the money all along.

Ostler, who noted the older brother had no juvenile or adult record, handed out the suspended sentence but ordered Beck to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Robert Alan Karpinski, 25, of 1204 Yates, $400; Peter Woo, 18, of 3670 Doncaster, $400; and Dexter Edward Ferris, 52, of 2695 Rainville, $250.

Doman case moved to city

The B.C. Supreme Court, after hearing in Vancouver a petition by Doman Industries Ltd. contesting a North Cowichan rezoning bylaw restricting industry on the Cowichan River estuary, has adjourned the case to Victoria.

The decision came after the court heard two days of argument presented by Doman lawyer Terry O'Grady of Victoria.

The hearing will resume Wednesday and is expected to take the rest of the week.

Doman petitioned the court earlier this month to quash the bylaw.

Two Lake Cowichan businessmen, Bert Rodenbush and Norman Rooke, are also involved in similar litigation, but argument on their behalf by Duncan lawyer Don Taylor has not been heard.

Conflicting definitions in two statutes of precisely when a person becomes 17 years old posed a dilemma in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday for Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie.

McKenzie decided to reserve judgment and give it in writing later.

The case began recently in family court and because it may (or may not) involve a juvenile, his name is not being published.

The youth was accused of possession of stolen property on a certain date which was also his 17th birthday.

Judge Lawrence Brahan ruled he did not have jurisdiction to hear the matter because, under the Interpretation Act, the youth wasn't a juvenile.

That act says you are 17 when your birthday begins.

Once you are 17, charges must be laid in adult court.

The youth apparently was too old for juvenile court and too young for adult court.

After Brahan said he had no jurisdiction to hear the case in family court, the prosecution decided to appeal to Supreme Court.

The youth's lawyer, John Hills, told McKenzie the Juvenile Delinquents Act has no definitive interpretation of age. Because of that, he argued that the Interpretation Act should be followed.

The problem of an apparent "free day" between being a juvenile and an adult, said Hills, lies with Parliament and should not bear on the court's consideration of this case.

Dismissal suit filed

Leslie Drew, city editor of The Daily Colonist, was among four non-union employees given termination notices Aug. 1 at the time the company announced The Daily Colonist and the Victoria Times will merge next Tuesday to form a two-edition Times-Colonist.

In her writ, Drew claims general and specific damages suffered as a result of wrongful termination as of Sept. 1, together with interest and costs of the action.

Guild to resist shift changes

Members of the Newspaper Guild at Victoria Press Ltd. voted Thursday to reject shift changes planned by management for the merger Tuesday of the Colonist and the Times.

The two dailies will be replaced with the Times-Colonist, a single newspaper with morning and afternoon editions.

According to Times-Colonist publisher Colin McCullough, publication of the morning and evening editions of the new paper will go ahead as scheduled.

"The only difference," McCullough said, "will unfortunately be that because of the guild action the papers will not immediately have the editorial quality that had been planned and that all of us intended to achieve."

The guild members, who work in the newsrooms, circulation and advertising departments, voted to report for work at their original starting times pending arbitration of their grievance, the guild said.

The guild contract with the company stipulates there isn't to be any change in starting times without written notice and consultation three months in advance. The merger was announced Aug. 1 and shift changes came after that.

The company's position is that a letter of understanding which forms part of the agreement stipulates the guild will co-operate where changes in starting time are required for efficient operation.

The company also faces grievances from the International Typographical Union and the Printing Pressman's Union, both of which are oppposing layoffs ordered in connection with the merger.

The guild has also called for prosecution and new laws as a result of corporate moves by the Thomson and Southam newspaper chains that closed two newspapers and affected several others.

In a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau, the guild said it was dismayed and outraged to learn of what it termed the flagrant carving up of Canadian markets by the country's two biggest newspaper chains, clearly in restraint of trade.

The chains announced this week that Southam's Winnipeg Tribune and Thomson's Ottawa Journal would be shut down.

Southam also purchased Thomson's holdings in Pacific Press Ltd.

The guild dismissed as inappropriate, a suggestion by Jim Fleming, minister of state for multiculturism, that cabinet might look at the possibility of an inquiry.

"The situation demands — and we demand — vigorous prosecution, severe penalties, and whatever laws are needed to make sure such irresponsible and evil actions are never tried again, in any field of buisness," the guild says.

In Vancouver, a group of newspaper employees will gather in front of the Pacific Press building Tuesday to mourn what one organizer called "the passing of newspaper competition in Canada."

"We are basically paying our last respects to the Ottawa Journal and Winnipeg Tribune, and to the people who lost their jobs when the Victoria Times and the Victoria Colonist merged," she said Thursday.

The organizer, who asked not to be identified, said the half-hour event isn't a protest and will take place during the lunch break so Pacific Press employees won't disrupt production.

City council backs bid for press inquiry

A federal inquiry into the closure, merger and sale of a number of Canadian newspapers was urged Thursday by Victoria city council.

The motion, put before council by Ald. Robimn Blencoe, also urged the Federation of Canadian Municipalities to ask for a federal review of the concentration of media ownership.

Blencoe told council the recent developments in Canada's newspaper industry pose a serious threat to a free and competitive press.

He said the concentration of newspaper ownership in the hands of two large companies — Thomson Newspapers Ltd. and Southam — jeopardizes the concept of freedom of speech and expression of opinion.

Inherent in the elimination of competition is the eventual destruction of the free enterprise system, Blencoe said.

Ald. Ken Sinclair, however, didn't see it that way.

He said the motion shouldn't even be before council because the corporate moves of the past few days haven't affected Victoria.

"We will still have two newspapers — the Colonist and The Times," he said.

When told later that the two papers would merge next week and publish two editions, he said: "I didn't know that."

The motion was approved in a six-to-three vote with Wright, McKenzie and Sinclair voting against.

In Ottawa, federal Opposition Leader Joe Clark called Thursday for an inquiry into this week's closing of the Ottawa Journal and The Winnipeg Tribune.

"While there is always the necessity to be particularly careful in matters relating to parliamentary inquiries into the press, I think that the circumstances of these happening together, particularly against the background of the closing of The (Montreal) Star, Montreal-Matin and one of the papers in Victoria, demand that there be some further work undertaken by Parliament."

And in Vancouver, a Newspaper Guild official says he will ask Justice Minister Jean Chretien to seek an interim court injunction banning the change of ownership of the Vancouver Sun and the closing of the Winnipeg Tribune and Ottawa Journal.

Kindergarten just an echo

OTTAWA (CP) — When students return to school next week, there will be fewer of them, fewer teachers and even fewer schools than last year.

A statistics Canada report released today projecting education figures for the next two years across the country says enrolment is declining at every level of education except kindergarten. The single most important cause is the declining birthrate.

And kindergarten enrolment, which will rise marginally by 7,000 this September to 389,000 from 382,000 in 1979, increases only temporarily because of something known as the baby boom echo.

The echo is the rise in births caused when the largest years of the post-war baby boom pass through the child-bearing years.

But there is little good news for the teaching profession.

The number of teachers in elementary and secondary schools will fall by 4,100 to 262,000 this September, and a further loss of 7,000 full-time teaching jobs is projected by 1982.

Enrolment in elementary and secondary schools drops by 115,000 this year to 5,017,000. An additional loss of 195,000 by 1982 is projected.

Universities, colleges and other post-secondary institutions are also suffering from the decline.

And the number of schools at all levels of education is projected to drop from 15,142 this year to 14,974 in 1982. Since last year, 85 schools — all at the elementary and secondary level, closed.

The only thing that is steadily increasing across the country, according to the report, is the money spent on education. Expenditures from all sources, personal and government, rose from $21.2 billion in 1979 to $22.6 billion this year. They will hit $24.1 billion in 1981.

Premiers agree on 3 items

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government was left isolated Thursday as the 10 provinces reached unanimous agreement in the key constitutional areas of communications, fisheries and offshore resources.

But as the 11 governments headed into the homestretch of summer-long constitutional talks leading up to a first ministers' meeting next month there was still wide disagreement on the issue many regard as the most crucial — control of natural resources.

The dispute over resources appeared to stack Ottawa and Ontario against the West.

Roy Romanow, Saskatchewan attorney-general and co-chairman of the talks with Justice Minister Jean Chretien, said the federal government had shown some movement by offering to give the provinces more control over resources.

"The movement is not satisfactory to the majority of the resource provinces and a majority of the provinces," he told reporters.

"If we're going to have renewed federalism . . .for Western Canada, a strong and meaningful constitutional provision on resources means renewal of the confederation."

The federal offer would allow the provinces to pass laws for the management of their resources even though they would fall under the trade and commerce power, now reserved exclusively for the federal government under the British North America Act.

But the provinces, with the notable exception of Ontario, balked at the other part of the proposal — that Ottawa be given the right to overrule the provinces in areas of dispute. The principle is known as federal paramountcy.

Specific details of the agreements were not released but reporters were told the provinces had agreed that in the communications field they want control of cable television and the right to regulate telephone companies. Chretien opposes this position.

On the fisheries, over which the federal government now has near total control, the provinces also say they want to peel away some federal powers. Ottawa has not made a counter offer in this area.

On offshore resources, the 10 provinces agreed to the principle that they should be treated the same as landlocked resources and be 100 per cent owned by the adjacent province.

The constitution is vague on ownership of the offshore resources, not being foreseen when it was passed by the British Parliament in 1867. But an isolated Supreme Court of Canada test case on British Columbia offshore resources several years ago found in favor of ownership by Ottawa.

The federal government came close to agreement with the Atlantic Provinces three years ago on a provincial-federal ownership percentage split of 75-25. But it since has been rejected by the Atlantic premiers.

The 11 governments also appear close to agreement on the wording of a preamble to the constitution which would recognize at least the notion of Quebec's freedom to associate with Canada.

Quebec at first demanded the right to self-determination be recognized in the preamble. A compromise phrase saying the provinces are "freely united" appears to be finding favor with Quebec.

The withholding of federal support for the three areas of provincial agreement means the two positions will be dropped on the table for debate at the September meeting, of which Trudeau will be chairman.

"The big question is if he has 10 that agree to something and he doesn't, how does he handle it?" asked Thomas Wells, Ontario minister of intergovernmental affairs.

Today the federal and provincial cabinet ministers will wind up their summer-long wrangle over the constitution with a debate on another contentious issue — the division of powers over the economy.

The federal government wants more economic powers in a new constitution to allow it to knock down what it considers are provincially-erected barriers to the free flow of goods, services, labor and capital among provinces, all in the name of safeguarding the economic union.

Ottawa, for example, opposes a recentl-enacted Newfoundland law which gives Newfoundlanders priority in provincial oil industry jobs.

But the provinces argue for the right to pass laws affecting their own cultural, social and economic development.

Turn job over to others: Clark

TORONTO (CP) — The job of rewriting the constitution should be taken away from the prime minister and the premiers and turned over to a special convention of MPs, members of provincial legislatures and 10 other outstanding Canadians, Conservative leader Joe Clark said Thursday following a two-day meeting of his party's caucus committee on constitutional reform.

"We believe that such a convention, representative of more than simply governments, operating within a realistic deadline, would satisfy the desire of Canadians for concrete progress on constitutional changes that truly reflect the needs and realities of modern Canada."

Conferences involving only representatives of government are unlikely to resolve the more important differences between Canadians on constitutional issues, he said.

Trudeau and the premiers are meeting in Ottawa Sept. 8-12 in an effort to solve the problems.

Trudeau and the premiers "all have vested interests to protect," Clark said. "They bargain at the margin rather than reach to the root of reform."

Clark told the caucus that his suggested convention should have 110 delegates with 50 from Parliament, 48 from provincial legislatures, two from the territories and 10 other Canadians, including representatives of native people.

Clark said the plan would free the federal and provincial governments to deal with economic and energy matters.

Bloc troop manoeuvre staged near border

GDANSK (AP) — Strike leaders said today the new purge in Poland's Communist leadership and promise of democratic union elections will not bring an immediate end to the walkouts by more than 150,000 workers on Poland's northern Baltic coast.

Gdansk Radio reported that the strikes along the Gdansk coast continued today, and most plants and ports remained idle. Workers expressed a cautious degree of encouragement, and awaited the government's next move.

A Bulgarian artillery unit reached the manoeuvres site today, hard on the heels of a Czechoslovakian contingent that arrived Sunday, the official East Berlin news agency ADN reported.

The military exercise, which will involve 10,000 troops from six countries of the Soviet-led Warsaw pact, is scheduled for mid-September and concerns Western defence analysts who fear Moscow may use the manoeuvres to cover a military move to end the strikes — a ploy used in the invasion of Czechoslovakia eight years ago.

First Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski returned to Gdansk to arrange a second meeting with strike leaders, government sources said. Jagielski held an unprecedented meeting with the strike leaders Saturday.

Jagielski said the government will consider relaxing some aspects of censorship and increased news coverage of the strike, but he rejected the strikers' demand for an increase in the average monthly pay to $237 from $170 to offset rising meat prices caused by an end to government subsidies July 1.

And in an effort to end the 12-day old strike, Communist Party leader Edward Gierek announced the firing of Premier Edward Babiuch and eight other top officials Sunday, and promised that union officials would be elected from among candidates nominated by the workers.

It was the biggest purge since Gierek came to power following the 1970 price riots in Gdansk that toppled party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka and left 50 dead.

Gierek also promised "fully democratic, secret elections with an unlimited number of candidates" to replace the government-appointed trade union officials in all factories where the workers want them.

But he rejected the strikers' demands for free trade unions and political reforms such as the right to strike, an end to censorship and the release of all political prisoners.

"We will go on striking," Leszek Walesa, head of the central strike committee, told 2,000 strikers at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk. "Only free trade unions can make us happy."

However, some of the strike leaders appeared to welcome the appointment of the new premier, Joze Pinkowski.

Closed-circuit TV monitor not spying, says PO chief

TORONTO (CP) — The use of closed circuit-television monitors in postal stations is "not a matter of spying on our people," says John F. Cochrane, Ontario regional manager of the post office.

Testifying Thursday at a federal inquiry into post office security, Cochrane said the monitors at the Gateway plant in nearby Mississauga, Ont., — the second largest post office plant in the world — are used for surveillance only during the investigation of postal thefts.

"CCTV up to this period of time has been used very little in Toronto, in about 22 cases," he told Ontario County Court Judge Rene Merin who has a mandate to determine whether mail theft and other crimes within the post office warrant giving postal investigators the wider powers of peace officers.

Cochrane also said that between April, 1979, and March, 1980, the post office paid $1.8 million in Ontario to claims concerning damage, loss or theft of mail and parcels.

Mail and parcels are insurable to Canada Post only to a maximum of $1,000. Cochrane said 123 cases of theft were investigated during that period, but only 17 people were prosecuted mainly because of insufficient evidence.

"That's the tip of the iceberg — people who are caught. We just don't catch people that easily."

The $1.8-million figure only indicates what the post office paid out in insurance claims in the Ontario region and bears little relationship to the actual financial loss to the public, he testified.

An investigation into postal thefts sometimes takes weeks longer than it would if postal investigators had the status of peace officers who have access to many police services, power to obtain search warrants and powers of search and seizure in cases involving post office crime, Cochrane said.

Asked whether he would be alarmed by a proliferation of private police forces, Cochrane said he would have some concern if employees in corporations such as Bell Canada had peace officer status.

However, he said he believes postal investigators need the peace officer status and that employees in some other agencies, such as Air Canada, may need the status as well.

He also said postal investigators should not be given the peace officer status unless they receive better training in civil liberties and attend courses dealing with preventive security, investigation and the Criminal Code of Canada.

Bar opposes search curbs

MONTREAL (CP) — Although police in Ontario and Quebec have raided bars and forced patrons to submit to strip searches in the washrooms, the Canadian Bar Association voted Thursday against any legal restraint on such searches.

The association, ending an annual convention whose theme was law in the 1980s, also passed what Inuit lawyer Marc Denhez of Ottawa called a "meaningless" resolution on constitutional change.

It took no position whatsoever on entrenchment of rights in the constitution as a protection for individuals facing the growing array of police, prosecutors, tax investigators, liquor inspectors and other government agents.

In the only major speech on the subject, Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said entrenched rights would only hedge police with technicalities.

The strip-search resolution was voted down after a delegate said it would hamper police.

It had been proposed by Toronto lawyer Victor Paisley, who explained that it would require police to get a written order from a judge before doing more than a perfunctory search for weapons.

Paisley said police in Quebec and Alberta have taken individuals to hospitals where surgical operations were done to search for drugs.

He also mentioned a case in Southern Ontario in which dozens of patrons in a hotel bar, men and women, were forced by police to strip in the washrooms and submit to anal searches for drugs. No drugs were found in that raid.

A similar raid also took place in Hull, Que., outraging the people who were searched. They included school teachers enjoying an evening out. No drugs were found there either.

Under Canadian law, police can enter a bar, restaurant or any other place and search everyone in it.

If the association of lawyers was soft on rights, it was even softer on constitutional change.

Denhez, a lawyer representing the Inuit Tapirisat, said a resolution proposing that native peoples be mentioned in any new constitution was "totally meaningless." Native peoples already are mentioned in the British North America Act.

Denhez also criticized the results of an investigation the association ordered last year into the rights of aboriginal peoples. He said that it entailed a 90-minute chat six months ago with the Inuit Tapirisat.

And he noted that the resulting resolution said the Inuit should be lumped with status Indians and Metis under the heading "Indians" in a new constitution.

"How can the bar stand for due process when its own procedures are so suspect?" Denhez, angered by passage of the resolution, demanded in an interview.

He noted that Canadians are guaranteed no rights in the British North America Act, which is concerned mainly with division of powers between the federal and provincial governments.

The result for Inuit as well as other Canadians, is that they don't have a leg to stand on when they quarrel with government.

The whole aim of a constitution, Denhez said, should be to give the individual some protection against government.

Lawyers oppose stiff drug terms

MONTREAL (CP) — Delegates to the Canadian Bar Association's annual convention passed a resolution Thursday urging the federal government to repeal the minimum seven-year sentence for importing narcotics.

The maximum sentence for charges of importing drugs is life. Winnipeg lawyer Greg Brodsky said the importing charge has been placed against youths entering Canada with a marijuana cigarette in their pockets.

But the lawyers voted down 37 to 21 a resolution that would have required a judge's written order before police could search a person for drugs.

I'll shoot me a new toe, Yukon barkeep vows

YELLOWKNIFE, NWT (CP) — Life hasn't been easy for Yukon gold miner Gary Young since he accidentally swallowed another man's toe while downing a legendary sour toe cocktail.

The toe was swimming around in a drink concocted by river boat captain Dick Stevenson, who found it in a cabin he bought.

Looking for a replacement, Stevenson said he's "in the market for toes, and if somebody doesn't come forward with one, I'll shoot my own off. That's a promise. There will be a toe by the first of June.

Stevenson thought it would be a great Yukon-style challenge to let the toe swim around in a beer glass full of champagne.

"It was shrivelled up and had a big toe-nail on it. It was kind of yellowish. It was a horrible looking thing all right — a real challenge drink."

But when Young tipped took up the challenge, he tipped too far.

The "rules" state that if anyone ever drank the toe, he'd just have to replace it with one of his own.

Mounties 'can break laws'

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP commissioner R.H. Simmonds has told Mounties they can break certain laws — but not commit crimes — in the line of duty, the McDonald commission investigating allegations of RCMP wrongdoing was told Thursday.

Pierre Lamontagne, a lawyer for the RCMP, told the commission Simmonds sent out a directive last Monday ordering force members to obey federal and provincial laws and municipal bylaws.

But the directive "goes on to give certain exceptions" where Mounties watching or chasing suspects could reasonably break traffic laws or certain municipal bylaws, the lawyer said.

The directive, which was not made public, spells out "exceptions where members have to use their judgment," he said.

Simmonds' directive appeared to have been prompted by a paper prepared by lawyers for the commission which stated the force's policy on breaking the law during investigations or routine operations was unclear.

The paper, made public today, quoted Simmonds' instructions to Mounties last December that it was permissible for them to break the law when there is no emergency.

The paper was one of two released today by the commission, setting out issues it must deal with in its final report, expected this fall.

The papers said the Mounties may frequently break the law and even commit criminal offences in undercover work, drug investigations and trailing suspects.

There is "no place for timidity in surveillance work," an RCMP internal manual says. Mounties following suspected criminal spys "must take chances that ordinary citizens would not."

This could mean breaking traffic laws by making illegal U-turns, following too closely, driving too slowly, or having false drivers licences and car registrations.

Security service officers might have to register in a hotel under a false name to keep tabs on a suspected spy, thereby breaking the law in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Ontario or British Columbia.

Using informants or having Mounties work undercover is one of the RCMP's most effective investigative techniques,but it is also the one which causes the most concern for the force ,the papers say.

Informers or undercover officers may have to break laws ranging from carrying a false driver's licence to committing a robbery or other criminal act to establish their credentials with the criminals they are infiltrating.

If Mounties supply false documents, they may be guilty of forgery or other criminal offences.

Grits accept PC Loto deal

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has decided not to dispute the validity of a deal signed by the former Progressive Conservative administration to hand over Loto Canada to the provinces, Communications Minister Francis Fox said Thursday.

He said in an interview cabinet has decided "to cash the cheques and divide the money between sports and the arts."

When the Liberals returned to power in February after nine months in opposition, Sports Minister Gerald Regan refused to recognize the Conservative deal, which turned the federal lottery over to the provinces for $24 million a year.

He had refused since to cash the $6-million quarterly cheques from the provinces.

But the cabinet has now decided not to challenge the deal in the courts or in negotiations with the provinces, Fox said.

Since the agreement was signed last fall, the federal cut has increased to $26.4 million for this year because of an indexing provision.

Grade A egg deal for Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Almost one million dozen Canadian eggs have been sold to Iraq, the Canadian egg marketing agency said Thursday.

A news release from the agency said the deal is part of a sale negotiated through international dealers of 1.8 million dozen eggs from Canada and the United States. The price was about $750,000 for the Canadian eggs.

The agency said the eggs were bought from Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba producers.

Suspected mauler shot in Banff

CALGARY (CP) — Parks Canada officials believe they have killed the black bear responsible for last Sunday's attack on a Calgary man in Banff National Park, spokesman Ken Preston said Thursday.

He said wardens cornered the bear Wednesday night in an area close to the scene of the attack.

One of the survivors of the attack has seen the carcass and is sure it is the bear responsible, he added.

The search for the rogue bear began Sunday night, but officials were doubtful they would find it because of dense bush and the animal's long head-start.

Ernest Cohoe, 38, was fishing with three companions when he was attacked by the male, adult bear. He is reported in stable condition in a Calgary hospital.

The mauling was the fourth one reported in Alberta this month. Two weeks ago, two oilfield workers were killed by a bear in northern Alberta and a woman was attacked while sleeping in her tent.

Tanker reaches Arctic goal

REA POINT, N.W.T. (CP) — The Irving Arctic reached its destination Thursday on the landmark voyage of the first Canadian commercial vessel to penetrate this far into the high Arctic, a spokesman on board confirmed by radio-telephone.

The 38,000-ton tanker arrived at this barren spot on Melville Island to deliver 100,000 barrels of petroleum products to a Panarctic Oils Ltd. drilling operation.

She arrived one day ahead of schedule and the spokesman said the vessel met good sailing conditions and light ice for most of the route. The Irving Arctic left Saint John, N.B., on Aug. 14.

$30,000 to Moonie dad

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A father who fought for five years to see his daughter — only to see her speak against him in court — has been awarded $30,000 after contending the Unification Church violated his rights as a parent in recruiting her.

Don Kieffer had asked $1 million in damages, contending the church "deprived him of his natural parental right" by recruiting his daughter when she was a minor. He also contended the church "continued to exercise its mind-control techniques" over Jana after recruiting her.

David Hager, legal director of the church — whose members are sometimes called Moonies — said the church had never before lost a suit over its recruitment or retention of members.

Hager said he believes the U.S. District Court jury found the church responsible for violating the father's rights as a parent, not with controlling the young woman's mind. "If they found mind control, they would have socked us for a million bucks," Hager said.

The five-woman two-man jury deliberated for five hours before deciding the suit after 15 days of testimony.

Hager, reached at the church's legal office in New York, called the decision "a token victory" for Kieffer. But he said the case will be appealed because it involves the issue of "religious liberty."

Kieffer said the award was a victory. But the father, who saw Jana for the first time in five years when she testified against him at the trial, said he will not be satisfied until she returns home.

"I feel good about the decision, but I still feel badly that Jana is not back with her family," Kieffer said. "I would give up everything to have her back."

Jana, now 21, was introduced by her mother to the church, which is led by Rev. Sun Myung Moon, a South Korean industrialist and evangelist. Her mother and Kieffer — who adopted Jana, a child of his wife's first marriage — are divorced.

Gas-saving device passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A gadget that cuts off a car's air conditioner when the vehicle accelerates has become the first product aimed at cutting gasoline consumption to win U.S. government endorsement.

The device, marketed under the name Pass Master, can provide a "small but real fuel economy benefit," the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said.

Motorists might realize up to four-per-cent fuel reduction while using their air conditioners on cars equipped with the device, the agency said.

The Pass Master, which sells for less than $15, is the first of 40 products to pass the EPA's tests as making any "statistically significant" improvement in a car's mileage.

Marketed by Gas Saver Automotive Marketing Co. of Inwood, N.Y., the Pass Master, which is connected to an engine's intake manifold, cuts off the air conditioning compressor during heavy acceleration, allowing a car to speed up without the extra power demand from the compressor.

The mob pigs out on pizza

New York Times

NEW YORK — Investigators in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania say organized crime has increased its control over local cheese and pizza enterprises, a move they say is part of mob efforts to run the lucrative industry nationally.

After a two-year study prompted by a surge of arson at pizzerias in the state, the Pennsylvania Crime Commission reported that it had found a nationwide web of interlocking underworld control extending from manufacturers of mozzarella cheese through distributors to corner pizza shops.

While the commission emphasized that many cheese companies and pizzerias, including some large pizza chains, remained untouched by organized crime, it concluded that mob-linked manufacturers and distributors of Italian cheese specialties "now control a substantial part of sales and deliveries to legitimate pizza shops in addition to those shops already under the ownership and control of criminal organizations."

Organized crime has acted to stifle competition from legitimate operators and suppliers by means of a variety of tactics, including arson, death threats and start-up loans to shops to guarantee continued business for the distributor-lender following the issuance of a loan, the commission and other law enforcement authorities say.

In addition, the Pennsylvania report said, some pizzeria owners cut business costs by skimming large amounts of cash from their businesses to avoid paying taxes. These owners are also said to staff their pizzerias with underpaid illegal aliens from Italy who have been smuggled into the country through Canada.

The Pennsylvania Crime Commission estimated that cheese and pizza companies skimmed $25 million a year in Pennsylvania alone. The commission's findings have been turned over to state and federal authorities for further investigation.

An investigator familiar with the continuing New York inquiry said people in organized crime might have "skimmed" millions of dollars in profits from pizza and cheese companies in the last 10 years.

5 years given Russian priest

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian Orthodox priest Gleb Yakunin was found guilty Thursday of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda and sentenced to five years in a labor camp and five years of internal exile, his wife reported.

Yakunin, 46-year-old co-founder of a dissident group to defend the rights of Christian believers in the Soviet Union, had declared in court Wednesday that his activities were "my religious duty as a priest," his wife told reporters.

She said he denied his work was aimed at subverting the Soviet state.

He was reported charged under Article 70 of the Russian Federation Criminal Code, which bars "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda." The article provides for a labor-camp sentence of up to seven years, followed by exile to a remote part of the Soviet Union for five years more.

His wife reported from the courtroom Wednesday that the prosecutor had called for a five-year camp term at hard labor, followed by the maximum five years in exile.

Meanwhile, the trial of another leading dissident activist, Tatanya Velikanova, was reported to have resumed at a separate courthouse in East Moscow.

He massages your feet to prod the life force

LONDON (CP) — If you want to learn the secret of your "sole" put your feet in the hand of Canadian Gaston St. Pierre.

A former journalist, St. Pierre left his Gaspe Peninsula home 18 years ago for England where he founded the Metamorphic Association.

The dictionary defines metamorphosis as a change in character through natural agencies and that is just what St. Pierre's association hopes to achieve through the metamorphic technique — a method of massaging the feet, hands and head. Practitioners believe this regular massaging acts as a catalyst to release or enhance an individual's life-force.

St. Pierre, 41, defines the life force as "the difference between a corpse and a living human being."

"Look at it in terms of boulders in a stream where the boulders represent the mental, emotional or spiritual blocks in a person's life.

"By massaging the feet regularly the life force begins to flow more freely."

Although St. Pierre says his association is concerned only with encouraging others, through regular massage, to release their own life force, "I can also tell a lot about a person and their problems from their feet."

Personality traits can be gleaned for instance from the type of in-step, the amount of foot moisture, the bone structure and the size of the toes.

Even if you are skeptical about the hidden powers of the metamorphic technique, says St. Pierre, an hour's massage at $13.50 a session "will leave you relaxed, happy and better able to cope with the pressures of life."

ADDING INJURY TO INSULT, motorist Lee Thompson of Brimfield, Ill., fell to the ground and hurt his head when he stepped out of the hung-up vehicle shown above. The mishap occurred because Thompson didn't realize a retaining wall and about two metres separated two parking lots in Peoria, Ill. Thompson drove onto the trash dumpster which, in turn, rolled away from the wall.

Rebel chief set to fight

PORT MORESBY (AP) — Jimmy Stevens, leader of the bow-and-arrow rebellion on the South Pacific island of Espiritu Santo, refused to surrender today, setting the stage for sharp fighting with Papua-New Guinea soldiers who surround the town he controls.

Col. Tony Huai, commander of the Papua New Guinea soldiers based in the main Santo city of Luganville at the invitation of the new Vanuatu government, said Stevens refused to come out of the town of Vanafo with other leaders of his secessionist rebellion.

"It looks as if he's going to stay in Vanafo and fight," Huai said in a telephone interview. "This morning he said he won't be coming down to talk to us. I think he's being pressured by others. Some are quite prepared to fight."

The colonel said that as soon he received the message by letter that Stevens would not surrender, he sent a letter back to the rebels "telling them to make sure all the 60 to 70 women and children were out of Vanafo."

He would not reveal his plans on a possible combat move into Vanafo, but said if he did so he would take an infantry company of about 120 men.

There are about 500 rebels in Vanafo, said a rebel captured earlier this week, but is is unsure how many of those would be willing to bear arms against a force of combat infantrymen.

Stevens and his men, backed by French plantation owners and U.S. businessmen seeking a tax haven, took over Espiritu Santo in May. The rebels demanded autonomy for the island, hoping their armed presence would be enough to scare off the central government in Port Vila.

But the prime minister, Walter Lini, weathered the insurrection and when his island chain won independence from 74 years of British-French rule on July 31 he called in several hundred soldiers from Papua-New Guinea.

Gandhi prepares to lower boom

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's ruling party announced plans Thursday to change the constitution to give her government power to send troops to "disturbed" areas and set up special courts.

The move, reminiscent of Gandhi's 1975 emergency clampdown, is guaranteed success because her Congress I Party has a constitutional two-thirds majority in Parliament.

Madhu Limaye, secretary general of the opposition oppostion Lok Dal Party, condemned the action and said, "It will be a savage law."

Government officials said the decision to amend the constitution — allowing the federal government to declare areas "distrubed" and then send in troops — was made Wednesday at a cabinet meeting chaired by Gandhi.

Such power previously was restricted to state governments. The government cited widespread economic, ethnic and religious riots in several parts of the country as reasons for the change.

The amendment also will give the federal government power to set up special courts for expediting trials of people charged with disturbing law and order in a state.

The Janata Party, which took over from Gandhi after she was ousted in 1977, amended the constitution to restrict the government's powers to declare a state of internal national emergency.

The amended constitution authorized the government to impose a national, but not a state, emergency only if there were an external threat or armed domestic rebellion.

Since all but five of India's 22 state governments are controlled by Gandhi's Congress I Party or its allies, implementation of the new power appears to be merely a technicality.

But the five non-Congress Party state governments — particularly those in Kerala, West Bangal and Tripura — are expected to strongly oppose the move.

Vehement opposition, however, could lead to the dismissal of an opposition state government.

Tidal wave strikes fleet

DACCA (AP) — More than 100 fishing boats and their crews were reported missing today in the Bay of Bengal following a tidal wave near the Bangladesh resort of Coxsbazar, near Chittagong.

Reports from the area said about 14,000 people were affected because of damage to homes when the surging waters reached shore Wednesday. Flood protection embankments were broken and water covered fields, the reports said.

Meanwhile, official sources said flooding in various parts of Bangladesh has affected more than 10 million people in 13 districts and caused extensive damage to crops on about one million acres. They said the death toll from the flooding resulting from heavy rains this week had reached 350.

Preliminary estimates showed damage caused by the floods will be more than $100 million.

Some 500,000 houses in Kushtia, Bogra, Faridpur, Rajshahi, Tangail, Pabna and Jessore have been damaged, the sources said. In Dacca, the capital, 500,000 people have been affected and 150,000 homes damaged, the sources added.

'I told him not to worry, I'd get him out somehow'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — He bucked incalculable odds and ignored advice to quit. U.S. Army Sgt. David Evans persisted — and met success on a Malaysian beach.

There he found his Vietnamese brother-in-law, who had fled Vietnam last year with tens of thousands of other "boat people."

"The Malaysian army gave us two minutes," Evans said in an interview. "I cried. He cried. I told him not to worry, I'd get him out somehow."

It took almost another year for Van Phi Hong, now 24, to make it to the United States. Now he's taking English-language courses, helped by his 30-year-old sister, Thu Evans.

Evans, 37, an army recruiting officer here, met Thu in Vietnam, where her mother was a maid at the U.S. Military Assistance Command. The couple married in 1966 and had a son, Danny, a year later.

When they left Vietnam in 1972, Evans said, they had U.S. government assurance that Thu's family — her mother, a sister and three brothers — would be evacuated in the event of a Communist victory.

Saigon fell in 1975. Nothing was done to get his in-laws to safety, Evans said.

Years passed. The odd letter from Mrs. Evans's family found its way to the United States. Then, in June, 1979, the Evanses were stunned to get a scrawled letter — Hong had escaped to Malaysia.

Borrowing $3,000 in gold from a businessman cousin, Hong had bought passage — a plank seat — in a fishing boat he shared with 201 other refugees.

Hong wrote his letter, telling the Evanses he had arrived on No. VT-135, the registration number of the boat. He said he was at Joohore Bahru, a place name he'd copied from the label on a can of food.

He gave the letter, without postage, to some Malaysian soldiers. "Good guys," Hong says of them for posting his letter. A month later, it reached California.

Evans immediately telephoned the U.S. embassy in Kuala Lumpur. "Yes, the VT-135 had touched here," he was told, and "Yes, boats are being pushed back to sea."

Evans set out, catching military flights. From Singapore he took a bus to Johore Bahru, but found no sign of the VT-135. Someone suggested he go north to Mersing.

With no other practical transportation available, Evans took taxis at $100 a day. He checked village police stations and found a helpful United Nations official. But no VT-135.

Just when his search seemed hopeless, Evans spotted the boat number on a Mersing police ledger. But the boat had been moved.

Evans kept looking. He asked around. The area was dotted with other beaches, other boats, other camps of boat people. A police vehicle eventually took him to the right beach.

Then, when Evans was finally united with Hong, Malaysian soldiers told him he had to have a letter from the prime minister's office for Hong's release. Evans left for Kuala Lumpur.

When he returned to the beach with the letter, his heart sank: hundreds of young male refugees were being pushed out to sea on repaired boats.

But Hong's boat "was still two or three days from being pushed back," Evans recalled.

He gave the soldiers the letter, slipped Hong some clothes, toothpaste and cash, then left his brother-in-law in the care of the UN official, a Scandinavian who placed Hong in a camp to await release through a Catholic social service agency.

Two delays kept the Evanses waiting anxiously in California. First, Hong — as a brother rather than a parent or child of a U.S. citizen — was placed in a secondary immigration category.

Secondly, Hong had contracted tuberculosis and needed medical clearance tests.

Evans's trip took three weeks and cost $2,000. On the way home, he ran out of money and sold his camera and watch, "and I bummed a dollar from a sailor." After his return, he was to spend another $1,000 in telephone calls clearing Hong's way to the United States.

He had bought a house here, but sold it and moved his family into military housing because of trip expenses.

"A lot of people ask my why I did it," Evans said. "I did it for my wife, of course.

"But more than that, it was something I had to do for myself," Evans said, explaining a resentment he still feels about his wife's family being left behind in Vietnam.

U.S. fears for vital mineral supply

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A House of Representatives subcommittee has urged major changes in U.S. relations with southern Africa to protect vital strategic mineral sources.

The subcommittee on mines and mining, which visited South Africa, Zaire and Zimbabwe last January, said the U.S. is vulnerable to supply disruptions of strategic minerals because of political instability in the region.

In its report on the January visit, the subcommittee described policy towards South Africa as "a virtual disaster" which would be greatly improved with more "carrot" and less "stick".

It said the U.S. should refrain from undermining Zaire's President Sese Seko Mobutu but at the same time apply pressure toward a cure for his "Zairian sickness".

In newly-independent Zimbabwe, the U.S. should assume leadership among other developed countries in taking up with Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's government Western concerns about mineral supplies.

Representative James Santini (Dem. Nev.) said U.S. foreign policy had been conducted with little regard for dependence on stable sources of strategic minerals needed for defence and industry.

"Despite the mineral wealth of southern Africa and our dangerous over-reliance, the U.S. is doing little to protect its own interests," he said.

The U.S. imports about two dozen critical minerals and 100 per cent of its manganese, cobalt, chromium and platinum from southern Africa.

In its recommendations on dealings with South Africa, the subcommittee said Washington has presented a somewhat confused and uncertain picture.

Although the U.S. government has established communication with certain elements of the black community, it was largely ignoring the white-minority South African government and business community.

Although the U.S. government should press for continued improvement in the lot of black South Africans, it should acknowledge and praise reforms that have already been made, the subcommittee said.

On Zaire, the subcommittee said the West has no identifiable alternative to Mobutu's government and that any move by Washington to dissociate itself from his government "would only be symbolic since the French and Belgians would continue to back him."

It said U.S. influence should be directed toward more a favorable Zairian investment code to establish incentives for international mining companies to sink venture capital and technical know-how into Zairian mineral resources.

In Zimbabwe, the subcommittee said it is essential that the maintenance of mineral availability be a high priority for Washington. "Nationalization by Zimbabwe with or without compensation, should be strongly discouraged," it said.

California U gene-splicer accused of violating guides

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A scientist at the University of California, San Diego, has been told not to do any more cloning experiments because because he may have deliberately violated federal gene-splicing safety guidelines.

The university's biosafety committee, taking the severest action possible, said Thursday that Dr. Ian Kennedy, 37, may have intentionally violated the guidelines of the National Institutes of Health.

But the committee pointed out it was also possible the error occurred "due to poor record keeping or lapse of memory."

Kennedy's response to the charge that he may have deliberately violated the federal guidelines, was "very categorically no." But he conceded, "I would probably have come to the same conclusions."

He is free to carry on his other non-cloning research.

Kennedy said he set out late last year to clone the sindbis virus, which is approved for cloning by the NIH. Instead, lab analysis showed Kennedy has used semiki forest virus to do the cloning.

At the time, the material was not approved for cloning. Since then, it has been placed on the approved list.

Kennedy resigned from the biosafety committee last spring when four graduate students in his lab went to biology chairman Donald Helsinki to report the possibility Kennedy may have cloned a prohibited virus.

Seizure of power plant darkens parts of Kabul

NEW DELHI (AP) — Afghan insurgents and defecting government troops seized an electric power station at Sorobi, east of Kabul, plunging parts of the Afghan capital into darkness for two days earlier this week, reports reaching India said Thursday.

It was not clear from the report whether the rebels still had control of the plant.

An estimated 340 soldiers, making up most of the army garrison at Sorobi, 80 kilometres east of Kabul, deserted to the rebels with their weapons, a source in Kabul said.

An earlier Kabul report said Soviet troops had been rushed to Sorobi last week because of trouble at the commando barracks there.

The Soviet Union sent up to 100,000 troops into Afghanistan last December to help the Marxist government against Moslem insurgents.

The reports on Sorobi squared with other information reaching India of heavy fighting along the Khyber pass highway stretching from Kabul through Sorobi to Jalalabad, 160 kilometres east of the capital.

A report from Western diplomatic sources said, however, that the highway between Kabul and Jalalabad was reopened Thursday.

Earlier Afghan reports had said military activity and Soviet troops movements closed it Aug. 20 and that the rebels had mined about 135 kilometres of the pass, from the Red bridge on the outskirts of Jalalabad to Mahipur, 25 kilometres east of Kabul.

Another Kabul report said Soviet forces had bombarded the old city of Jalalabad, where insurgents have taken control. It said the governor of Nangahar province and other officials had taken refuge in a military base.

A source said casualties were high on both sides in the Jalalabad fighting, with the Soviet and government side losing more than 300 lives, seven helicopters and two MiG jets. No estimate of rebel casualties was given.

China's official Xinhua news agency quoted travellers reaching Islamabad, Pakistan, from Kabul as saying said the Afghan economy has been seriously damaged as a result of the Soviet military intervention.

China and the Soviet Union, which both border Afghanistan, have been political arch enemies for years.

The Chinese news agency quoted the travellers as saying production in industries and mines has come to a standstill. It also claimed production in the Ainak copper mine near Kabul and the natural gas fields in the northern part of Afghanistan cannot be guaranteed despite supervision by Soviet troops.

Brickbats greet Carter on economic package

WASHINGTON (CP) — The unemployed, the taxpayer and depressed American industry stand to gain at least modestly from an economic renewal program President Carter has promised, but partisan opponents attacked the plan while some political allies were unimpressed.

Stock-market prices declined in the wake of the budget-like announcement from the White House on Thursday, although analysts said other depressing factors such as rising interest rates were the main cause.

Carter's long-promised Economic Blueprint for The 1980s was designed to do double duty as a centrepiece of his campaign for re-election Nov. 4.

As such, it provoked a prompt dismissal by Republican challenger Ronald Reagan as "a short-term political quick fix" that won't jolt the country out of recession.

Reagan's words are an almost exact echo of language used by Democrats at their party convention two weeks ago to assail the Republican candidate's promise of sweeping tax reductions for business and individuals to have the economy moving and the eight million jobless Americans back to work.

The Carter promise to expand unemployment benefits, offset scheduled personal tax increases and provide tax incentives to industry also received a cool response from some Democrats who had been pressing for more dramatic anti-recession measures.

Democratic Congressmen Thomas Downey of New York and Robert Edgar of Pennsulvania offered faint praise. Downey said the package is inadequate and Edgar added: "It still needs a lot of work."

Strike ends at Times

LONDON (Reuter) — Journalists on The Times, Britain's oldest daily newspaper, voted today to end their strike over pay which has stopped publication of the newspaper since last Friday.

The company said it will publish again Saturday.

A joint statement from management and the National Union of Journalists said the 18-month agreement provides an annual increase of 18 per cent.

Management had declined to offer the 21 per cent raise urged by an independent arbitration board.

Dissident crackdown continues

MOSCOW (AP) — Tatyana Velikanova, a leading Russian dissident, was sentenced today to four years at hard labor, to be followed by five years in exile in a remote part of the country, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

On Thursday, a Moscow court condemned another active member of the dissident movement, Russian Orthodox priest Gleb Yakunin, to five years at hard labor and five of internal exile. The cases are the first major dissident trials since the Moscow Olympics.

Moscow Radio said Mrs. Velikanova, 47, had distributed materials defaming the Soviet system and "had them transferred to the West for the subsequent use by imperialist propaganda centres."

"The inquest and depositions of witnesses have proven the degree of her implication," the radio said in its international service.

Relatives reported from her trial that prosecutors appeared to have built their case largely around Mrs. Velikanova's alleged involvement with the Chronicle of Current Events, an underground dissident publication.

They said witnesses included labor camp officials and prisoners, who rebutted claims in the chronicle of poor conditions at labor camps.

CIA inspires new TV series

by vernon scott

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The CIA — in disrepute since the hippies and yippies found a political voice in the anti-establishment '60s — is the inspiration for a new TV series titled The CIA.

The much abused Central Intelligence Agency, America's cloak and dagger guys who counter the Soviet Union's KGB operations throughout the world, apparently has regained some of its respectability and glamor.

But for many years the agency's recruitment of businessmen, journalists and students abroad brought howls of protest from liberals who cried that the CIA was suborning American morality.

Claims were also made that the agency was tinkering with all manner of constitutional guarantees and that it was being used for political purposes — spying on liberal groups and such.

CIA supporters, many of them from the political right, claimed the United States was being severely crippled in international politics and the arms race because of political tampering with our intelligence gathering agency.

Like the FBI at the time, the CIA was much in the public eye, anathema to an organization which strives for covert operations.

Increasing reports of Russian military superiority and a blizzard of stories — some news, others best-selling fiction — chronicling the U.S.S.R.'s spy network, is reversing public opinion toward the CIA.

Then, too, there's George Bush. The Republican vice presidential candidate is a former CIA director which does not seem to count against him.

But the man doing most to popularize the CIA as a beneficent American institution is attorney Larry Thompson of Hollywood.

Thompson, a Mississippian, runs an entertainment conglomerate which manages the careers of many stars and includes a production arm. For almost five years Thompson has been trying to get The CIA on the air.

His quest for official CIA cooperation has been touch and go. Certainly, the secret agency couldn't open its files. Also, is it proper for the agency to work with a profit-motivated entertainment enterprise?

The CIA's public image didn't help any.

But the temper of the country apparently has changed enough to insure that a show based on undercover American intelligence operations would have a good chance of succeeding.

"We have the CIA's unofficial cooperation," Thompson said, "and an exclusive contract with the Association of Former Intelligent Officers (AFIO), an alumni group of the CIA sworn by contract to secrecy for life on classified material.

"With their help, we're going to film a series of one-hour fictional dramas based on actual covert operations.

"The AFIO will make sure everything is technically correct but not factual enough to identify actual operations. We will use fictional agents."

Thompson said The CIA cannot be compared to the defunct FBI series, explaining that CIA operations are an endless web of espionage without clearly defined story limitations — a beginning, middle and end.

He says if his series had a subtitle it would be "The Longest War."

"The CIA is more cerebral than the FBI," he said. "There is less action and gunplay. Stories involve the struggle for and the dissemination of information.

Thompson envisions the show as a combination of "Mission: impossible" and "Sherlock Holmes." Many revolutionary, but declassified, undercover weapons will be seen.

But most actual CIA apparatus techniques, contacts, drops, codes and other secret stuff will not be seen. Indeed, Thompson is not privy to them.

The series, moreover, will be shot entirely on foreign locations for the excellent reason that the CIA is not allowed by law to operate in the United States, according to Thompson.

"Former director Bill Colby says the public knows nothing about the CIA by design," Thompson said. "The fragments that are known have been distorted because they are not perceived in the CIA structure as a whole.

Canadian movie steals the show

By INA WARREN

MONTREAL (CP) — The big star of the opening of Montreal's fourth World Film Festival wasn't to be found in the audience, it was up there on the screen.

The Lucky Star, a Canadian movie enjoying its world premiere at the Montreal festival, received a highly enthusiastic response from the crowd of film buffs and film critics. At past festivals, it has been a tough audience to win over.

Set in war-torn Holland, the movie is the poignant yet comic tale of a Jewish boy who escapes into the heroic world of cowboy fantasies.

Filmed in Montreal and Holland, it was written and directed by Dutch filmmaker Max Fischer and was produced by Claude Leger of Montreal.

The movie wasn't shown officially at Cannes, but it received high praise when shown to buyers at the film market.

The Lucky Star stars Rod Steiger, Louise Fletcher, Lou Jacobi and a fine cast of Dutch and Quebecois actors including Quebec's Jean Gascon, Yvon Dufour and young Isabelle Megias, an appealing new screen presence.

Starring as the young Jewish boy who single-handedly takes on the Nazis, is Brett Marx, a young, blond, blue-eyed American actor whose looks are a cross between the angelic absurdity of Harpo Marx and the classic handsomeness of Paul Newman. Even at age 14 it's a devastating combination.

Brett and Lucky Star director Max Fischer were in the opening-night audience at Place des Arts, adding a dash of excitement to what is shaping up as a festival without the added glamor of the big-name stars that attended earlier festivals.

Carole Laure and boyfriend Lewis Furey were in the audience, as was pop singer Robert Charlebois and Quebec actress Louise Marleau, winner of the best actress award at last year's festival.

BRADFORD, England (AP) — Two young mothers and four of their children, all under six, died when a fire which started in a basement swept through a three-storey house in this northern city.

Aussie press shuns singer

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Journalists in Australia's second largest city of Melbourne have banned coverage of movie and singing star Olivia Newton-John because a photographer claimed he was assaulted by the Australian-born performer's manager.

Marc Fallander, who works for the Melbourne Sun, said the incident took place Sunday when he was assigned to photograph Ms. Newton-John and American screen star John Travolta, her co-star in the musical movie, Grease.

Fallander, said "I was approached by a man who identified himself as Olivia's manager, Lee Kramer.

"I was grabbed by the collar and thrown on to the bonnet (hood) of a car and we wrestled for about 30 or 40 seconds, then he took off.

"He gave no reasons. He just said I'm Lee Kramer, Olivia's manager. If you try and take any pictures tonight I'll shove your camera down your throat", Fallander said.

Graham Walsh of the local branch of the Australian Journalists' Association said a ban would be imposed on coverage of Ms. Newton-John while the allegations were investigated.

Education not sex 'soap opera' goal

NEW YORK (AP) — Soap operas must entertain, says Agnes Nixon, a veteran writer of radio and television serials, "but within the form we can educate; education can be entertainment."

"Just as all entertainment has gotten more liberal and outspoken, so has soap opera," Mrs. Nixon says, noting that such programs now address subjects that were once taboo.

All My Children is known for doing contemporary stories of a sociological nature," said Mrs. Nixon, who created that show and One Life To Live for the ABC network and has created and written many other daytime serials.

"We try to enlighten the public; we try to remove prejudice," she explained in an interview, citing the exploration of such areas as women's liberation, uterine cancer, teenage pregnancy and teenage prostitution.

"It's not from a sex angle, but to educate," she said. "For instance, we tried to show that teenage prostitutes were not inherently bad, but rather that bad situations may have caused prostitution.

"The most satisfying to me was a nine-month story we did on child abuse. It took me two years to face doing it, since I felt anyone who would abuse a child was a monster. But as I did research I realized they were not monsters, but sick — 95 per cent were abused themselves in childhood, emotionally or psychologically, if not physically."

Mrs. Nixon has no objection to the term soap opera. "It is its own genre, no one claims it's Shakespeare but we're the closest form of entertainment to real life."

Many men view the show and the mail indicates its fans run the gamut of intellectual, educational and social strata, from near-illiterates to college professors.

Newcomers to this audience will have a chance to catch up on what has been happening in the 10-year-old series with the publication of three Agnes Nixon's All My Children paperbacks. They were written by Rosemarie Santini, who read all the scripts, starting with the program's January 1970 debut.

"I wanted to be an actress and went to Northwestern University," Mrs. Nixon recalled, "but among my classmates were Charlton Heston, Cloris Leachman, Patricia Neal, Martha Hyer and Jean Hagen.

"I decided I'd better be a writer and took scriptwriting courses."

She later wrote for many of the top shows. "It was live TV," she said. "Nobody knew what we were doing — we just did it."

After most television production moved to Hollywood, Mrs. Nixon, married by then, stayed on the East Coast and went back to daytime serials.

Ballet founder dies

TORONTO (CP) — Pearl Whitehead, one of three women who founded the National Ballet of Canada in 1951, died Tuesday. She was 89.

Mrs. Whitehead was born near Stratford, Ont., and graduated from the Toronto Conservatory of Music in 1917.

She then moved to New York City where she was appointed contralto soloist for the First Presbyterian Church.

In 1919, she returned to Toronto and a year later married Roy Whitehead, now deceased. They had three children, sons Phillip and Roderick, and a daughter, Nancy.

Along with Eileen Woods and Syd Mulqueen, Mrs. Whitehead founded the National Ballet and took an active part in its affairs until 10 years ago.

She was a member of the women's committee of the Toronto Symphony, president of the Women's Club of Toronto and president of the Canadian Guild of Crafts. In 1975, she was made a member of the Order of Canada.

"She was a terrific lady," said Celia Franca, the ballet's first director and head of the company from 1951 until 1973.

"Pearl was one who had great faith in what she believed. Fortunately for the National Ballet, she believed in it."

Contract Bridge B. Jay Becker

♠A K 10
◇K 7
♣Q J 8 6 2

♠5
♡K Q 9 7 4
◇A J 8 3

S

The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	Redble	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

South wins your heart lead with the ace, East playing the five, and cashes the A-K-10 of spades, East playing the 4-2-6. On a low club lead from dummy, East plays the four and declarer the king. How would you defend the hand?

* * *

You have to don your thinking cap securely for this one. The first problem is whether to win the club, but, before deciding this, you should turn your mind to constructing the kind of hand declarer must have for the contract to be defeated.

You start by brushing aside those hands where the contract is indefensible. You can't win by conceding defeat. All your thoughts should be concentrated on thinking of hands in which South has four losers.

You know from the bidding and East's high-low in trumps (indicating three of them) that South started with six trumps. He therefore has ten tricks when and if you take the ace of clubs — assuming you give him a chance to cash them. They consist of six spades, two clubs, a heart and a diamond.

However, there is a chance of snatching four tricks before South snatches ten — if the cards are divided as you must hope they are. You are obviously limited to one trick in clubs and one in diamonds, so your only chance is to win two heart tricks. This is possible in only one case, namely, if East started with specifically the J-5 of hearts. Since this is your only hope, you should defend on that basis.

Win the club with the ace and play a low heart. This effort is rewarded when East wins with the jack, returns a diamond, and you cash the queen of hearts to put the contract down one.

In the actual case, South had:

and was defeated by the low heart return.

"Yes, Five children, two boys and three girls," said Paul. "And they're all married."

Doug smiled. "Quite a family. What ages are they?"

"Well, it's funny about that," Paul replied. "They are all spaced evenly one year apart, and the squares of their ages total just one less than the square of my age."

How old was Paul?

1. ROCKLAND RATTENBURY $425,000

Iron gates and winding drive lead through nearly an acre of meticulous mature grounds to one of Victoria's finest homes. Built in 1928 by Victoria's legendary architect, Frances Rattenbury, this impressive and exceptionally well planned residence embodies the utmost in gracious living, and full facilities for lavish entertaining. The entrance foyer with cloakroom lead to a 27 ft. grand entrance hall, which in turn opens onto all main rooms. The living room is 38 ft. by 18 ft. with exquisite views. The dining room is 18x14 with adjoining conservatory and stainless steel butlers pantry. There is also a separate office/sunroom plus a panelled den with fireplace and wet bar. The kitchen is crisp and modern with built-in oven and Jenn-Air range and a sunny breakfast room. Upstairs are 5 bedrooms, all ensuite, including a spectacular master suite with fireplace, balcony and large dressing room. Behind the double garage is an added bonus, a completely seperate and self-contained suite for staff, inlaws, or whatever. Rarely does a property of this calibre become available. If you have been looking for something very special don't miss this opportunity.

2. SOUTH OAK BAY

Over 3400 square feet of near new character located beautifully on a quiet lane. Traditional 2 storey design with exceptionally spacious rooms, grand open staircase, soft beige carpeting enhancing all rooms, including family room, den, playroom, 4 or 5 bedrooms. Just a few of the many pluses: huge jacuzzi ensuite, oak kitchen, intercom, vacu-system, thermo windows, double height — dougle width garage. Super location, fantastic space. $246,000.

3. PENINSULA CONTEMPORARY $169,000

Located on a high bright acre adjoining the park — this is a total departure from the ordinary: vaulted ceilings, white walls, chocolate carpeting, 3 fireplaces (one is in the master bedroom), almond tone kitchen, a huge multi-level deck spanning the entire southrn exposure. HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include, the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

$10 food bag now $18.90

OTTAWA (UPC) — A food package that cost Canadian consumers $10 only six years ago now costs $18.90 — and Agriculture Canada warns of higher meat prices to come.

The federal department reported Thursday that higher prices for meat, poultry, fresh fruit and bread pushed the cost of food up 1.6 per cent during the four-week period ended Aug. 15.

The cost to feed a family of four nutritionally, in August, was $70.12 — up $1.20 from July, the department said.

The latest price inceases, which followed a 3-percentage point rise in food prices in June, left food prices 16.3 per cent higher than a year ago and 89 per cent higher than in 1974.

Declining chicken supplies and higher beef and pork prices will probably push up meat prices next month too, the department said. Egg prices will also rise when a one-cent-a-dozen increase by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency takes effect in September.

Beef prices, ranging from a 0.5-per cent rise in ground beef to a 5.3-per cent hike for blade roast, increased by an average 2.6 per cent in the barbecue season between July 19 and Aug. 15.

Meanwhile, the climb in the price of pork — up 4.2 per cent — contributed to an increase of 9 per cent since June. Poultry prices rose 4.3 per cent.

Cereal and bakery products were up 4.8 per cent, mainly due to increases in bread costs .

St. John's, Nfld., continued to be the most expensive city for food in Canada, with a weekly bill to feed a family of four reaching $78.61 this month. Montreal had the lowest prices at $68.25 a week.

Edmonton Journal adds morning run

EDMONTON (CP) — The Journal will begin publishing an early-morning edition Sept. 2 that will compete directly with The Sun.

Journal publisher J.P. O'Callaghan made the announcement today, saying The Journal has not been hurt by the arrival of the tabloid Sun but is going to the early edition to take advantage of the capability of its new printing plant and to "serve the community at the time and the place the community wants."

The early edition of The Journal will be in 600 new boxes about 4 a.m. There will be no home delivery of the early edition.

"The two editions will have the same number of pages, the same advertising but will be considerably different in news content," O'Callaghan said. "This will make us an all-day newspaper."

The publication of the early edition will result in the hiring of approximately 10 new editorial staffers. Some of those will be from the Winnipeg Tribune, a Southam newspaper folded earlier this week. The Journal is also a Southam paper.

Soldier guards occupied embassy

Times News Services

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr warned today a trial of American hostages — now in their 300th day of captivity — would give the United States a pretext for intervening in Iran.

Bani-Sadr issued the warning in an interview with theleft-wing Paris newspaper Le Matin as the human rights organization Amnesty International urged Iran's new prime minister to halt executions and unfair trials under the Islamic regime.

Meanwhile, a Tehran radio broadcast, quoting the official Pars news agency, said three generals of the former regime of the late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi have been arrested and two have been handed over to the Central Revolution Court for trial. Those arrested were identifed as Amri Hushang Khalatbar, Hoseyn Rastgar-Namdar and Nasrollah Khoshnevisan.

Bani-Sadr said in the interview: "To judge and condemn the hostages (would mean) to engage in conflict with the United States, a conflict which would allow this superpower to continually intervene in Iran if one of the hostages was condemned to death.

The Iranian president said Iran was fighting to free itself from dependence on the United States.

"Essentially the problem of the hostages has had the opposite effect," he said. "The American hostages have made our country a hostage of the United States."

Bani Sadr repeated charges of U.S. interference in Iran.

"There is a vast program of intervention by the United States, he said, "and, according to information I received yesterday, two U.S. nuclear warships have just entered the Persian Gulf near our coast."

"The 300th day — those numbers bother me," said Dorothy Royer, 79, of Houston, Tex., whose son William is a captive. "I don't need to be reminded that it's that long."

DETROIT (UPI) — The recession may be ending for nearly 19,000 General Motors workers in the United States and 1,050 more in Canada.

The No. 1 automaker Thursday ordered car and truck production increases and worker recalls beginning in October — the strongest sign to date the auto industry is climbing out of its worst sales slump since the Great Depression.

This time, GM appeared more confident of growing economic strength that would sustain higher car and truck output.

The firm said it will resume second shift operations at two car and three truck assembly plants in the United States, restoring the jobs of 18,725 indefinitely idled workers, and at two plants in Canada where 1,050 will go back to work.

Higher output will be concentrated in full-sized and mid-sized cars and light trucks, GM said.

"There is growing evidence of strength in the market, signalled by such indicators as improving consumer confidence and higher used-car prices, which normally portend higher new-car sales," said F.J. McDonald, executive vice president for North American car and truck operations.

There are other signs that the recession's grip is weakening.

U.S.-built cars were selling in mid-August at an annual rate of 6.9 million, still depressed but well above the disastrous level of 5.2 million in May.

Long-term layoffs have declined over the past four weeks from a peak of just under 250,000 reached in July. Indefinite layoffs of U.S. hourly workers stood at 241,338 this week, down from 243,450 last week.

Second in row

The company said second shift operations will be resumed Oct. 27 for light trucks and Nov. 3 for sport-utility vehicles at its Chevrolet plant in Flint, Mich.; Oct. 6 for light trucks and Nov. 3 for cars at its Janesville, Wis., assembly plant, and Oct. 20 at the Leeds District assembly plant in Kansas City, Mo. Light truck production rates will be increased at the Baltimore assembly plant Oct. 6.

Those actions will result in the recall of 3,500 workers at Flint, 225 at Baltimore, 3,000 at Janesville, 2,000 at Kansas City and 10,000 at a number of parts plants.

In addition to the U.S. production increases, GM said it will increase line speeds on van production at its Scarborough plant and on car production at its Oshawa plant in Ontario, returning 1.050 employees to work. GM currently has 132,000 U.S. workers on indefinite layoff, compared with 66,500 at Ford Motor Co., 40,100 at Chrysler Corp., and 2,738 at American Motors Corp.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government index meant to forecast where the economy is headed shot up a record 4.6 per cent in July, it was reported today — another indication the nation is beginning to climb out of the current recession.

The increase, due mostly to businesses laying off fewer workers, was the second consecutive month the Composite Index of Leading Indicators has risen,the first time that has happened in more than a year.

The Commerce Department reported the 4.6 per cent rise in the index was the largest on record, eclipsing the previous high of 3.2 per cent in June, 1975, when the country was starting to recover from its last recession.

There have been other signs in recent weeks that the economy is slowly starting to recover. Factory orders are on the upswing, auto sales are improving and housing construction has started to increase again.

In a revision, the department said the index rose 1.5 per cent in June, instead of the 2.5 per cent originally reported. The index had fallen in each of the preceding eight months, with particularly large drops recorded during the spring.

Economists caution that the size of increases or decreases in the index, which now stands at 130.7 of its 1967 base of 100, do not necessarily translate into comparable movements in the over-all economy. They also say it generally takes three or more months for a clear economic trend to develop from the index.

Cautious note

"This confirms that the recession is near bottom, but I think the recovery is still going to be very, very slow," said Lawrence Chimerine, chief economist with Chase Econometrics in Philadelphia.

The most dramatic improvement and the biggest influence on the index came in the so-called layoff rate that is designed to keep track of how many factory workers are losing their jobs.

Q. "Having had to give up my outdoor garden, I do enjoy my houseplants but I've been having a real problem with my ferns turning brown and looking generally disreputable. How do I overcome this?"

Fern and palm lovers are often disappointed to find their precious plants turning brown at the edges, or spotting brown. Upon detecting any sort of spot on these plants, check first that it is not some sort of scale insect. Try to peel it off with your fingernail. If it turns out to be a scale, rub the scales off with a soapy cloth. If there are too many, you may have to spray with Malathion 50 per cent at the rate of two millilitres for each litre (two teaspoons/gallon) of water.

If, however, the spot is not detachable but rather a condition of the leaf fabric, other causes need to be looked into. The most common cause of foliage browning is inadequate moisture, either in the soil or in the air.

Q. "The house we bought last spring came with a greenhouse, something I haven't used before. Does it need special attention at this time of year?"

Many avid gardeners these days are either constructing greenhouses themselves or are purchasing one of the many models of pre-constructed metal-frame-and-plastic jobs now on the market. Once they have experienced a season or two of using their greenhouses, they realize what an attractive atmosphere this sheltered, humid enclosure is for more species of pest than they ever thought existed. Some, like yourself, wonder what sanitary measures should be adopted in order to enjoy a season relatively free of pests and diseases.

It's a good idea to empty the greenhouse at least once a year, most logically during the time of its most limited use and before it starts getting crowded with new plants. Wash the interior with a household disinfectant, then hose it down with clear water. If there are any painted surfaces inside, a fresh coat of paint is in order.

While in use, the greenhouse should be provided with adequate ventilation and ordinary precautions such as using only sterilized potting soil, and flats of other planting containers that have been thoroughly scrubbed. If there is any particular type of crawling beastie infesting your neighborhood at the moment, spread its favorite bait along the entranceway to the greenhouse.

At the moment, we're getting by with a makeshift greenhouse my husband put together, but when the family budget permits we're going to invest in a more elaborate one. Plain or sophisticated, all greenhouses require vigilant maintenance.

Q. "I find that patches of my lawn are dying back and moss is taking over the bare spots. Is there a remedy for this?"

This is not usually a problem in lawns that are well fertilized and well drained. I would take steps to aerate the problem areas, either with an aerator or a digging fork, and apply a good lawn fertilizer. Re-seed the barren spots.

If the area is shaded, prune some of the lower branches of the trees to improve light conditions and air circulation.

Q. "Why did they inflict metric on the unfortunate gardener?" (I've had several variations of this question from Island gardeners.)

I suppose this could be construed as a rather political question which is hardly in the realm of a garden columnist but I'll tackle it nevertheless. I think Canada's going metric if logical inasmuch as the rest of the world, with one or two notable exceptions, uses that system.

My criticism would be with the timing. Our major trading partner is the U.S. and any conversion, in my view, should be co-ordinated with that country's.

Although metric is a fact of life in Canada, it's not easy to convert. I guess we're all going to have to get used to centimetres and litres and kilograms just as we have adjusted to Celsius — even though it can be a painfully slow process.

U.S. taking fusion gamble

By LEE DEMBART
Los Angeles Times

With virtually no public debate and little public attention, the United States is about to embark on a $2 billion project to convert the theory of atomic fusion into the technology for generating electricity.

Physicists have been trying for nearly three decades to figure out how to force atoms of hydrogen together in a controlled reaction that releases vast amounts of useful energy. In the process, they have had to develop and learn the science of plasma physics and have faced a plethora of scientific and technical problems. But they now believe they are in sight of their goal.

Fusion research has failed so far to produce a single controlled fusion reaction. But experimental successes in the last two years have led scientists to conclude that the principle is sound and that it can be physically demonstrated in the next two or three years.

Decades

Even the most ardent supporters still see decades of work before the first kilowatt of commercial electricity can be generated. But they have successfully argued to Congress that the time has come to begin full-scale engineering development of a method of harnessing the power of the stars on earth.

"We're no longer questioning whether fusion is scientifically feasible or not," Lee Berry, fusion director at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, one of half a dozen major research centers, said in a telephone interview. "We're worrying about engineering development."

"A couple of generations of test facilities are going to have to be built," said Stephen O. Dean, president of Fusion Power Associates, the industry lobbying group. "They'll have to be engineered, they'll have to be assembled, they'll have to be operated, and the information will have to be used to assess the commercial viability."

National goal

The Science and Technology Committee of the House of Representatives has approved a bill that would establish such a national goal and commit $134 million for research next year into so-called magnetic fusion, the most promising path so far. The amount is $30 million more than President Carter sought in his budget message last January.

The House bill was introduce and shepherded by Rep. Mike McCormack (Dem—Wash.). It has 160 co-sponsors and, as yet, no opponents. So approval seems assured.

A companion bill introduced by Sen. Paul Tsongas (Dem—Mass.), is presently before the Senate Science Committee, where favorable action is expected shortly.

According to Edwin Kitner, director of fusion research at the Department of Energy, the fusion budget will have to be increased to about $700 million a year over the next four or five years, for a total spending of about $6 billion before the end of the decade. (Included in that is $2 billion for the preliminary engineering facility.)

Tantalizing

In all, the congressional bills envision spending a total of $20 billion by the year 2000 to get to the point where commercial practically can be evaluated.

By comparison, until 1973, the government spent less than $20 million a year on fusion research.

The thrust of all this attention and money is the tantalizing but elusive goal of reversing the process of atomic fussion, the source of energy in conventional nuclear power plants.

If two hydrogen atoms can be forced to fuse, they produce helium plus energy. This is the process that fuels the sun, the stars and the hydrogen bomb, so it certainly is known to occur.

What's more, enough fusionable hydrogen isotopes exist in ordinary seawater to meet the energy demands of the earth for the remainder of its existence, an almost-free and unembargoable source of fuel forever.

Irradiation

And, while fusion reactions will irradiate the vessels in which they occur, they produce no radioactive spent fuel, so the problem of waste disposal is vastly reduced and simplified.

But a controlled fusion reaction has yet to take place despite the best efforts of more than 6,000 scientists in the United States, the Soviet Union, Western Europe and Japan.

"This thing is still in the pie-in-the-sky category," a senior government official said of the fusion program. "maybe it'll work out, and maybe it won't work out."

The counterargument asks: What choice is there? Those who would rather spend large amount of public money on, for example, conservation cannot increase by one gallon the amount of fossil fuel on the earth. Conservation only buys time to develop something else. But eventually there must be a something else.

Half solar

But the inexhaustible something else must be either solar power or fusion, neither of which has been shown to be commercially feasible, though the solar research and development budget is about twice what the fusion budget is.

The first step, according to the fusion community and its friends in Congress, is to move forward now with the design and construction of a fusion engineering test facility.

The Department of Engergy will be charged with deciding where the Center for Fusion Engineering will be situated and also with putting together the proper mix of laboratory, university and industrial people to get the project going.

Work in this area is already under way at Oak Ridge, Tenn., which is one of the potential sites for the $2 billion center. In concept it is not much different from the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston.

Isotopes

To make fusion happen, the isotopes of hydrogen — deuterium and tritium — must be heated to temperature of 100 million degrees Celsius, which is six times the temperature of the inside of the sun, and they must be packed together and held there for a certain length of time.

At these temperatures, electrons are stripped off their atoms, leaving only the positively charged nuclei, which, containing the same charge, repel each other. The high temperature forces the nuclei to move fast enough to overcome the electrical repulsion.

To date, the necessary temperatures have been approached in some machines and the necessary density and confinement times in others, but no one has yet put together all three conditions.

Big laser

Less than a mile from the magnetic fusion experiments at the Livermore laboratory, an enormous laser called Shiva has been constructed to pursue experiments in inertial confinement fusion.

In the instant when the button is pressed, the Shiva laser generates 30 trillion watts — 50 times the total U.S. electric generating capacity. But the pulse occurs for only one billionth of a second.

A cynic might say that the fusion program is a Works Progress Administration for physicists. It keeps them employed.

The physicists and their supporters, however, say that it is by no means clear which approach offers the best way to build a commercial fusion reactor.

"It's a mistake to cut off the alternative technologies too early, before you're sure you have a winner," Roger Perkins, head of the Los Alamos program, said.

Fun City's windup

The reason: the land has become so valuable since the area was rezoned for industrial use that the owners can no longer keep it going.

Bill Massey, a co-owner of Coast Lighting which owns the attraction, said the land will be cleared for development.

Museum open on Labor Day

Provincial government offices will be closed Monday, Sept. 1, for the Labor Day holiday.

The Provincial Museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and guided tours of the Legislative Buildings will be conducted from 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The Emily Carr Gallery at 1107 Wharf Street will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

30% ICBC rate hike looms

Cost of auto accidents soaring

Premium hikes of at least 20 per cent lie ahead next year for B.C. motorists if accidents continue at their present rate, the president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. warned Thursday.

And Tom Holmes admitted the increases could go as high as 30 per cent if the accident trend worsens.

The grim predictions came as the ICBC revealed it lost $15.5 million on Autoplan in the first six months of this year.

Holmes said he views the increase in frequency and severity of claims with grave concern.

He said accident claims now are costing the corporation and B.C. motorists $1.2 million a day.

"We're concerned about future premium rates and all drivers should share this concern and exercise greater care on the roads," he said.

The reversal from last year, when the corporation earned $1.09 million, is due to increased accidents and spiraling costs of vehicle repairs, ICBC said.

The cost of claims jumped $40 million, or 22 per cent, to $218 million from $178 million last year.

Of that $40 million, $25 million resulted from increased severity in accident claims and $15 million related to the increase in the number of claims.

ICBC received 246,000 claims in the period, 19,000 more than last year, and the average claim was $886, an increase of $102 or 13 per cent from 1979.

The average bodily injury claim increased 10 per cent to $4,021, or $355 a claim more than last year.

Holmes said ICBC is attempting to offset the claims impact by increasing its efficiency. Operating expenses dropped 8.4 per cent and the corporation's expense ratio was 16.7 per cent of the premium dollars earned, down from 17.1 per cent in 1979.

"This is a significant achievement and compares very favorably with the North American industry average of over 30 per cent," said Holmes.

The corporation's investment strategy also is helping to offset claims, he said.

In the first six months, investment income climbed to $37 million from $28.4 million for the same period last year, an increase of 29 per cent.

The general insurance division had a surplus of $1.2 million compared to $1 million a year ago.

Brewery union pickets move at court order

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the brewery workers union obeyed a B.C. Supreme Court order today and removed a picket line in front of the provincial liquor distribution branch warehouse in east Vancouver.

The move followed threats by the branch to launch contempt of court proceedings against the union, which earlier defied a Supreme Court order to stop picketing the branch's warehouse.

Branch lawyers also threatened to sue the union for damages because of what the branch claimed were substantial additional costs from the pickets.

Members of the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union were served with a court order Thursday demanding they stop picketing the branch warehouse where an estimated 100,000 dozen bottles of imported beer are being stored pending delivery to liquor stores.

The brew was expected to leave the warehouse for Greater Vancouver area liquor stores as soon as pickets left, a warehouse official said today.

B.C. Labor Relations Board filed a cease-and-desist order with the court after the pickets, who set up the line last Friday, continued to disobey the branch's order, issued Tuesday following hearings.

Board chairman Don Munroe said he had no alternative but to seek court help in view of the union's defiance, which he said was "doing great damage to the reputation of the trade union movement.

About 900 union members have been locked out at three major B.C. breweries for more than four weeks in a dispute over a new collective agreement.

The branch has brought in increased amounts of imported beer to meet public demand. The increase brought union charges that the branch is acting as ally to the breweries — Carling-O'Keefe, Labatts and Molsons — and therefore open to picket action.

The breweries have offered the union members a $1-an-hour wage increase in each year of a three-year pact, while the union has been demanding a $1.05-an-hour increase in each year of a two-year contract.

3 Cubans wounded as jet seized in Peru

King Fisherman for all subscribers

As of Tuesday subscribers to the evening edition of the Times-Colonist will be eligible for prizes in the King Fisherman Contest, including the CP Air trip for two to Sydney, Australia, with $500 expense money.

There are 200 weigh-in stations on Vancouver Island ready to accept entries, which means that wherever you fish on Vancouver Island or the Gulf Islands there is a handy place to enter.

Evening edition subscibers must now make sure they tick the box on the entry form which asks: Are you a subscriber?

There are many hidden weight merchandise prizes each month, as well as the prizes to go with the trophies for the heaviest fish in each of the five categories — trout caught in lakes, small-mouth bass, chinook salmon, coho salmon and tyee salmon. Tyee are classed as chinooks 30 pounds and heavier caught north of Nile Creek or in Alberni Inlet-Barkley Sound and north. To qualify freshwater fish must be one pound or heavier and salmon five pounds or heavier.

LIMA (AP) — About 170 Cubans, many of them children, seeking to go to the United States seized a Los Angeles-bound Braniff jetliner on the ground in this Peruvian capital today, taking 14 people hostage, a Braniff spokesman said.

Three of the Cubans were injured by gunshots apparently fired by Peruvian police, authorities said. Witnesses said several other refugees were cut by glass after breaking windows of the terminal building to get onto the runway.

The group was part of some 400 Cubans who surged onto the runway as the plane was being prepared for boarding for a continuation of a flight from Rio de Janeiro to Los Angeles. Police jerked the ramp from the DC-8 jet to prevent more Cubans from boarding, witnesses said.

"What we want is to join our families in the United States" said Manuel Vega, a Cuban who could not get on the plane.

Braniff's manager in Lima, Leopoldo Pflucker, said: "It will all be settled soon. It's just a matter of time."

He said the hostages are believed to be 11 regular passengers and three flight attendants. Most of the flight crew was on the ground when the plane was seized, he said. Sixty-five of the Cubans are children, he added.

Associated Press correspondent Harold Olmos, who managed to climb the ramp and talk with one of the Cubans, said the situation now appears calm.

The press attache at the U.S. embassy said U.S. Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman is at the airport and in touch with Peruvian officials handling the negotiations, but he was not involved directly in the talks aboard the plane.

The embassy spokesman said the Cubans' only demand is to go to the United States.

Flight 920 was making a fuelling stopover in Lima and had been scheduled to depart for Los Angeles at 1:20 a.m. EDT, a Braniff spokesman said.

Radiation exposure oversight

MACKENZIE (CP) — An oversight in construction of a dental clinic here exposed dentists and dental staff to x-ray radiation for six years, a local official said Thursday.

District administrator Vern Ciccone said the building was designed in 1974 according to specifications of the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons "which for some reason did not include the lead shielding protection."

He said council first heard of the engineering omission in 1977 after a labor ministry building inspection.

"We nearly dropped dead when we got the inspector's report but after that there was an administration change and the notice to change the building got lost in the shuffle," Ciccone said.

He said further delays occurred when council could not find a contractor to make the necessary changes.

"We required special technicians to install some sort of shielding and it was too difficult to find someone," the administrator said.

An estimated $30,000 to $40,000 will be spent to line the walls and floors of two partitions in the clinic.

$400 state grant: I'll be doggoned

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — An Eagle River man has received a state grant of $400 to develop a dog-powered washing machine.

The grant to Bill Hall was among $120,000 awarded to 44 Alaskans this week to encourage the development of innovative energy technologies and renewable resources.

Hall's proposal calls for an exercise wheel to be used to harness the dogs for working the washing machine. The method is to be demonstrated by Hall, a computer specialist, at local dog mushing club meetings.

Hall's somewhat primitive mode of washing clothes involves a wheel and pulley system, two 55-gallon drums and modified toilet plungers.

Pierre's RSVP protocol spat

OTTAWA (CP) — A protocol spat between Alberta and Ottawa could force cancellation of Prime Minister Trudeau's participation in the province's gala 75th anniversary celebrations Monday.

Sources say Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed snubbed Trudeau by refusing to allow the prime minister to be included in the official party at a splashy ceremony on the lawn of the provincial legislature Monday.

The ceremony involves Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer, Lougheed, Alberta Lt.-Gov. Frank Lynch-Staunton and the Lord Mayor of London, Peter Gadsden, a native of the province.

The sources say that Alberta informally sought an indication from Trudeau early this summer on whether he would attend. When Trudeau confirmed a little more than two weeks ago that he would take part, he was told it was too late and the programs had already been printed.

Trudeau has instead been offered an invitation to a luncheon being thrown by Lougheed later in the day.

A spokesman in Trudeau's office would not comment on the spat other than to say the invitation to the luncheon has not yet been accepted.

Trudeau will participate in the official ceremonies for Saskatchewan's 75th anniversary celebrations in Regina three days later on Sept. 4.

Saskatchewan issued in invitation in May and Trudeau accepted it at the same time he confirmed he would attend the Alberta event.

Poland's crisis intensifies

GDANSK (AP) — The Polish labor crisis intensified today as talks aimed at ending the 15-day-old strikes stalled with both sides appearing unwilling to budge on the worker's key demand — trade unions free of government control.

Sources on the workers' strike committee said the number of strikebound enterprises in the tri-city region around Gdansk has swelled to 627, well above the 480 figure which the strikers claimed three days ago.

One strike committee member claimed workers in the vital coal and steel centres in Silesia have threatened to strike in support of the Gdansk workers if the government does not meet the trade union demand by Monday, the unofficial end of a "cooling off" period proposed by strike leader Leszek Walesa on Thursday.

In West Berlin, the Working Group for Human Rights claimed today several hundred ethnic Poles in the East German port of Rostock called in "sick" in a "solidarity action" with the workers across the border in Poland. The West German group had no information that other East German workers had joined them and the report could not be independently confirmed.

Hours after strike leaders in Gdansk called off scheduled talks with the government Thursday night, the government negotiators postponed a fourth face-to-face bargaining session scheduled for today, saying without explanation that they were "not yet ready" to meet the Baltic area strike leaders.

Sources on the Joint Strike Committee, which represents an estimated 300,000 workers on Poland's industrial north coast, said the talks, tentatively set for midday, might resume later today. It was not known if the government's postponement would cancel the later meeting.

The sources said they would press the chief government negotiator, First Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, for a "direct answer" on their demand for free trade unions, the main stumbling block in a settlement of the strike.

Word of the government's postponement came amid growing signs that the strikers are losing patience with what they consider government stalling on the trade union issue.

The claim that miners and steelworkers in the southwestern area might join the walkout could have far-reaching consequences for embattled Communist party leader Edward Gierek. The district is regarded as Gierek's main power base and the coal mines and steel mills have been relatively free of labor unrest.

Poland's labor turmoil began July 1 when the government halted meat-price subsidies, sending prices skyrocketing.

The strikers' initial complaints were economic, but as the strikes expanded so did their demands, which now include calls for freedom of the press, freedom for political prisoners and free trade unions.

In Edmonton, meanwhile, about 1,000 people, many holding placards and singing Polish songs, held a downtown rally in support of the striking workers in Poland.

Tillicum can't expand

The Capital Regional District passed a bylaw at a special meeting Thursday that will stop Saanich from allowing the proposed Tillicum shopping centre to expand to 450,000 square feet without regional board approval.

Directors voted 31-21 for a bylaw that restricts any regional centre or major district centre to 295,000 square feet.

The decision came after lengthy debate and some hot exchanges with board chairman Jim Campbell ruling Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier out of order on more than one occasion.

The bylaw was given all but its final reading earlier this year but had to lay in abeyance until litigation was completed.

Mr. Justice John Bouck handed down his judgment Wednesday, ruling that Saanich's action April 24 in lifting a covenant that restricted the shopping centre to 295,000 square feet was illegal because no rezoning public hearing had been held on the proposed expansion.

In his judgment, Bouck said: "The exact rule as to what is or is not good or bad faith seems to depend upon the precise factual problem in dispute. It is clear no member of Saanich council was going to receive any personal benefit by reason of the resolution of 24 April 1980.

"Yet, this resolution is tainted with an appearance of impropriety. After many months of bickering Saanich knew it had committed itself both to the public and the regional district that Tillicum would not exceed 295,000 square feet.

"That being so, why not call another public hearing and explain the reason for the change? Failure to do so gives the impression Saanich was attempting to avoid earlier representations. That is enough to make its actions condemned as having been carried out in bad faith."

The vote was 33-19 against when Saanich Ald. Howard Sturrock failed to get the matter tabled until Sept. 3.

"I really resent being stamped-ed the day after the judgment was handed down. There is nothing that can happen for at least 10 days," he said.

He and Couvelier said it would take that long to prepare for another public hearing on the expansion.

Couvelier wanted to make a compromise proposal once the bylaw was passed.

He wanted the regional district to call a hearing within 30 days to hear the developer, Cal Investments Ltd.

Ald. Bob Wright of Victoria said the time for compromise is over.

Ruling Couvelier out of order because the proposal was not on the agenda of the special meeting, Campbell said it was not proper for the board to instruct its staff to organize such a hearing.

After the bylaw received approval, Couvelier said he was disappointed.

TOWN TALK

All that huffing and puffing dished up by the weatherman Wednesday afternoon produced a windfall for one elderly shopper at the Fairways store at Gorge and Tillicum.

Parking space was at a premium and Town Talk's Man-on-the-Scene waited while the elderly shopper headed for his car. Suddenly, a variety of bills, mostly 20s, appeared from nowhere. The elderly gent scooped most of them up.

By his actions, the money did not appear to belong to him. He jumped into his car, gleefully displayed the find — which appeared to be more than $100 — to his wife, and started to pull out.

He stopped suddenly, spotted another $20 and a fiver, which his wife recovered from under the nose of TT's disappointed — and slow-moving — agent.

Unfortunately, we neglected to get the gentleman's licence number, and that won't help the loser, who may be wondering what happened to his money.

Fred Jeffries of Denver, Colorado, made a sentimental journey down Douglas Street this week and he did it on foot.

It was 33 years ago that he was last in Victoria, at the head of a parade by the crew of a U.S. destroyer.

"I remember we marched eight miles (12 kilometres) that day. There have been a lot of changes since 1947 but it's as beautiful here as ever. Possibly more beautiful."

He expects to be a regular visitor, having organized tours from Colorado into the Victoria-Vancouver area.

Some new potential nominees for Town Talk's semi-occasional Award for Buck Passing have surfaced in downtown Victoria . . . but everyone thinks the other guy should accept the nomination.

On hand to present the award is 10-year-old Zoe Rushforth, of 1748 Llandaff Place in Gordon Head, who won the Fancy Dress Competition on Victoria Day.

She said in a recent letter to the editor she'd covered herself with burnt cork, wore sooty clothes, carried a chimney sweep brush and won the Market Square event in May.

However, all that effort went for naught. Although a man told her the prize would be mailed, it never came.

"I don't think I'll enter next year if they aren't going to keep their promises about the prizes," Zoe's letter concluded.

The Market Square Merchants' Association disclaimed reponsibility, as did most everyone else.

So who is responsible? The Victoria Day Celebration Society? Bill Bennett? The Russians?

Someone phoned Zoe's mom and said it was the Canadiana Costume Society, wherever they may be.

One has to wonder who they'll blame next. Good luck Zoe.

We heard complaints this week that city hall wasn't releasing to callers the names or phone numbers of members of the police commission.

"What have they got to hide?" asked one citizen.

Enter Mayor Bill Tindall, chairman of the police board, who ordered the practice stopped on Thursday.

The list now is available on request.

Many of the complaints arose out remarks made by board members over the police contract negotiations which were settled last week after a summer-long police job action, a spokesman for the mayor's office said.

Seems city hall was anxious to protect the board members from nasty callers.

On the other hand, where was the protection for citizens with valid complaints?

Now both sides will be able to go at it, ear-to-ear, if not face-to-face.

Self-styled city watchdog Joe Richards wants city council to record meetings on tape and Mayor Bill Tindall says he'll think about it.

The two were, however, quite a bit apart on the estimated cost of a recording system.

Richards told council Thursday night it would make good sense to spend $150 on a recording system, considering it could save the city hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal costs.

"With a recording system you'll always know exactly who said what, and it would also assist the clerk," Richards said.

The mayor replied that the Capital Regional Board recently installed a recording system at a cost of about $8,000, but that he would give the matter some thought.

Dunhelm cleared to build

After years of controversy over numerous development proposals for a 2.5-acre parcel of land in James Bay, the way has finally been cleared for a 33-unit townhouse project.

Plans for Dunhelm Village, to be built at Boyd and Luxton, were approved Thursday night by Victoria city council following a public hearing.

Charles Ball of the James Bay Residents' League told council the developer had shown an admirable willingness to co-operate with the neighborhood.

He said the design was the result of numerous meetings between the developer and residents.

"I'd just like to say that this project has the overwhelming support of the community. This is an outstanding example of co-operation between the community and a developer."

In other business, council decided to include the Inner Harbor area in the zone in which time-share or interval occupancy ownership is permitted.

This means that Victoria developer and former Social Credit cabinet minister Sam Bawlf can go ahead with his plans of renting suites in his new Wharf Street condominium on a short-term basis.

Bawlf sold the 50 suites of the luxury waterfront condominium to individual investors, assuring them in a prospectus that they would be able to rent them to visitors on a weekly or monthly basis.

Fair to open early Saturday

The 112th annual Saanichton fair opens at 8 a.m. Saturday and continues through the Labor Day holiday on Monday.

The fair features Highland dancing and old-time fiddling on Saturday, and events and exhibitions during the three-day celebration include performing bands, farm animals, flower and fruit exhibits, 4-H Clubs, household arts, winemaking, foods and farm games.

The cost is $2 per person butthree-day tickets are available for $4.50. Proceeds are channelled back into the fairgrounds.

This year's fair will be a different one for Saanich-and-the-Islands MLA and finance minister Hugh Curtis.

Instead of staying in his booth waiting for visitors to drop in, his constituency office said Thursday Curtis will go out to meet the people by roaming the fairgrounds, renewing acquaintances, stopping to talk, listening to the concerns of the people and answering questions.

The Tories, the NDP and the Socialist Party of Canada are also traditionally represented at the fair.

Drivers face charges as crackdown starts

Colwood RCMP will be out in force over the holiday weekend cracking down on drinking drivers in the western communities.

Officers started their roving roadblocks overnight and, using the Batvan — the breathalyzer-analysis testing van — stopped 475 vehicles between 7:30 p.m. and 2:30 a.m.

Five motorists were charged with drinking driving offences, another with refusing to provide a breath sample, and four others were given 24-hour roadside suspensions when their blood alcohol readings were below the .08 legal limit.

Two motorists were caught driving while their licences were suspended, four received tickets for minor traffic violations and 18 got warnings.

And police throughout B.C. will be out in full force over the weekend in an accident prevention program, the transportation and attorney-general's ministries said Thursday.

Aircraft patrols, road checks, breath analysis testing vehicles and radar will be used to check holiday traffic.

The statement said the government is concerned about the increased number of traffic deaths on holiday weekends and the fact that people are complacently accepting those deaths.

The statement urges motorists to report any criminal or impaired driving behavior to police.

Send the teachers to the students

Spiralling university costs in inflation-ridden Britain are worrying developing Commonwealth countries which send so many of their students there, says Rubymay Parrott of the Saanich Peninsula school board.

And there is a strong school of thought which says the flow should be reversed and educators sent to the students in these countries.

Parrott, president of the Canadian School Trustees Association, was one of a 16-strong Canadian delegation that attended the eighth Commonwealth Education Conference in Colombo, the capital of Srilanka, formerly Ceylon.

"Their main concern was the increase in costs of university education," Parrott said in an interview. "The emphasis in the developing countries is still on a university education. They're trying very hard to develop technical schools in their own areas."

But Parrott said delegates from the 43 countries represented at the conference agreed that sending students abroad for a university education is not the best answer for developing countries.

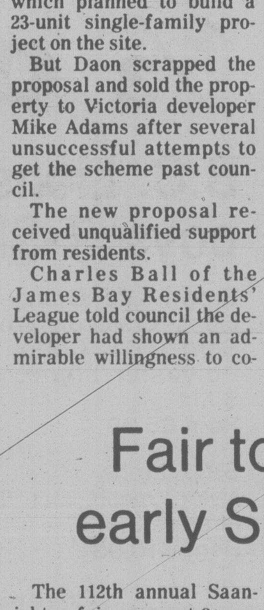
She says Canada offers 300 scholarships a year for students from Commonwealth countries. The scholarships cover tuition and living expenses.

She says the conference agreed it would be better to have experts go to developing countries.

"It's better to send experts to show them how to print their own books and teach equipment manufacturing and, eventually, develop their own situation or industry on-site with an education system ranging from kindergarten through and including university," she says.

While in Srilanka, Parrott visited schools, which she describes as "almost open-air pavilions with a roof and walls — no windows — and the desks out there in the open."



PARROTT
. . . some never return

Through Barbara Gunasekera, the principal of a school for 4,000 girls, Parrott received an invitation to visit a school for 7,000 boys. A show case school in the nation's capital, its students are drawn half from the surrounding area. Half the students were sons of the school's graduates.

She was asked to explain the Canadian education system to an assembly of 1,300 boys.

"They sat there without the slightest movement, just rapt attention," Parrott says.

The school's motto is Learn or Depart, reflecting the tenacity with which the country's youngsters absorb what education they can.

Teaching is not a lucrative profession in Srilanka. A starting teacher gets 500 rupees a month, a graduate teacher 775 while principals earn 4,000 rupees a month. Considering that 675 rupees represents $50, stipends are anything but generous.

While everybody speaks English, Parrott says there is great emphasis on the country's language and culture.

"There were 40 bands in the grounds playing for the opening," she says. "They were the best bands and entertainment I've ever seen school kids put on."

Centre leaps final obstacle

The proposed $8 million Wharf Street convention centre made it over the final hurdle Thursday.

Victoria city council approved an application for a development permit, giving the Provincial Capital Commission pdermission to call for tenders on the controversial waterfront project.

The only thing that could still stop the project is lack of financing, but Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, who is in charge of the capital commission, recently reassured the city funds will be available.

Aldermen John Cooper, Gretchen Brewin and Robin Blencoe were the only ones opposing the motion to approve the development permit application.

Cooper said he was stunned that council would commit itself to this project without knowing how the annual deficit would be financed and who would operate the centre.

"This is utter nonsense, tommyrot," he said.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices stabilized in relatively slow pre-holiday trading as the government reported a record increase in the index of leading economic indicators but fears of interest rate increases persisted.

The leading indicators — the closest thing the U.S. government has to an economic crystal ball — rose 4.6 per cent in July, easily surpassing theprevious record of 3.2 per cent, set in June 1975.

While that was seen as evidence that the recession may be nearing an end, analysts noted that one cause of the rapid increase was a surge in the money supply.

That increase has caused concern on Wall Street and led to speculationthat the Federal Reserve Board will tighten credit, thereby pushing up interest rates further. Rates have moved up sharply in recent days.

Utility stocks, which are sensitive to rising rates, were mixed. Virginia Electric Power was down ⅛ to $10⅞ and American Telephone and Telegraph was up ⅜ to $53⅜.

Precious metals stocks, which had remained strong earlier in the week, also turned mixed. Homestake Mining dropped ⅝ to $78⅝ and ASA was unchanged at $57¼.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed Friday at 483.9, up 1.2.

Industrials and oils declined while banks firmed.

'I told him not to worry, I'd get him out somehow'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — He bucked incalculable odds and ignored advice to quit. U.S. Army Sgt. David Evans persisted — and met success on a Malaysian beach.

There he found his Vietnamese brother-in-law, who had fled Vietnam last year with tens of thousands of other "boat people."

"The Malaysian army gave us two minutes," Evans said in an interview. "I cried. He cried. I told him not to worry, I'd get him out somehow."

It took almost another year for Van Phi Hong, now 24, to make it to the United States. Now he's taking English-language courses, helped by his 30-year-old sister, Thu Evans.

Evans, 37, an army recruiting officer here, met Thu in Vietnam, where her mother was a maid at the U.S. Military Assistance Command. The couple married in 1966 and had a son, Danny, a year later.

When they left Vietnam in 1972, Evans said, they had U.S. government assurance that Thu's family — her mother, a sister and three brothers — would be evacuated in the event of a Communist victory.

Saigon fell in 1975. Nothing was done to get his in-laws to safety, Evans said.

Years passed. The odd letter from Mrs. Evans's family found its way to the United States. Then, in June, 1979, the Evanses were stunned to get a scrawled letter — Hong had escaped to Malaysia.

Borrowing $3,000 in gold from a businessman cousin, Hong had bought passage — a plank seat — in a fishing boat he shared with 201 other refugees.

Hong wrote his letter, telling the Evanses he had arrived on No. VT-135, the registration number of the boat. He said he was at Joohore Bahru, a place name he'd copied from the label on a can of food.

He gave the letter, without postage, to some Malaysian soldiers. "Good guys," Hong says of them for posting his letter. A month later, it reached California.

Evans immediately telephoned the U.S. embassy in Kuala Lumpur. "Yes, the VT-135 had touched here," he was told, and "Yes, boats are being pushed back to sea."

Evans set out, catching military flights. From Singapore he took a bus to Johore Bahru, but found no sign of the VT-135. Someone suggested he go north to Mersing.

With no other practical transportation available, Evans took taxis at $100 a day. He checked village police stations and found a helpful United Nations official. But no VT-135.

Just when his search seemed hopeless, Evans spotted the boat number on a Mersing police ledger. But the boat had been moved.

Evans kept looking. He asked around. The area was dotted with other beaches, other boats, other camps of boat people. A police vehicle eventually took him to the right beach.

Then, when Evans was finally united with Hong, Malaysian soldiers told him he had to have a letter from the prime minister's office for Hong's release. Evans left for Kuala Lumpur.

When he returned to the beach with the letter, his heart sank: hundreds of young male refugees were being pushed out to sea on repaired boats.

But Hong's boat "was still two or three days from being pushed back," Evans recalled.

He gave the soldiers the letter, slipped Hong some clothes, toothpaste and cash, then left his brother-in-law in the care of the UN official, a Scandinavian who placed Hong in a camp to await release through a Catholic social service agency.

Two delays kept the Evanses waiting anxiously in California. First, Hong — as a brother rather than a parent or child of a U.S. citizen — was placed in a secondary immigration category.

Secondly, Hong had contracted tuberculosis and needed medical clearance tests.

Evans's trip took three weeks and cost $2,000. On the way home, he ran out of money and sold his camera and watch, "and I bummed a dollar from a sailor." After his return, he was to spend another $1,000 in telephone calls clearing Hong's way to the United States.

He had bought a house here, but sold it and moved his family into military housing because of trip expenses.

"A lot of people ask my why I did it," Evans said. "I did it for my wife, of course.

"But more than that, it was something I had to do for myself," Evans said, explaining a resentment he still feels about his wife's family being left behind in Vietnam.

U.S. fears for vital mineral supply

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A House of Representatives subcommittee has urged major changes in U.S. relations with southern Africa to protect vital strategic mineral sources.

The subcommittee on mines and mining, which visited South Africa, Zaire and Zimbabwe last January, said the U.S. is vulnerable to supply disruptions of strategic minerals because of political instability in the region.

In its report on the January visit, the subcommittee described policy towards South Africa as "a virtual disaster" which would be greatly improved with more "carrot" and less "stick".

It said the U.S. should refrain from undermining Zaire's President Sese Seko Mobutu but at the same time apply pressure toward a cure for his "Zairian sickness".

Representative James Santini (Dem. Nev.) said U.S. foreign policy had been conducted with little regard for dependence on stable sources of strategic minerals needed for defence and industry.

"Despite the mineral wealth of southern Africa and our dangerous over-reliance, the U.S. is doing little to protect its own interests," he said.

The U.S. imports about two dozen critical minerals and 100 per cent of its manganese, cobalt, chromium and platinum from southern Africa.

In its recommendations on dealings with South Africa, the subcommittee said Washington has presented a somewhat confused and uncertain picture.

Although the U.S. government has established communication with certain elements of the black community, it was largely ignoring the white-minority South African government and business community.

Although the U.S. government should press for continued improvement in the lot of black South Africans, it should acknowledge and praise reforms that have already been made, the subcommittee said.

On Zaire, the subcommittee said the West has no identifiable alternative to Mobutu's government and that any move by Washington to dissociate itself from his government "would only be symbolic since the French and Belgians would continue to back him."

It said U.S. influence should be directed toward more a favorable Zairian investment code to establish incentives for international mining companies to sink venture capital and technical know-how into Zairian mineral resources.

In Zimbabwe, the subcommittee said it is essential that the maintenance of mineral availability be a high priority for Washington. "Nationalization by Zimbabwe with or without compensation, should be strongly discouraged," it said.

California U gene-splicer accused of violating guides

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A scientist at the University of California, San Diego, has been told not to do any more cloning experiments because because he may have deliberately violated federal gene-splicing safety guidelines.

The university's biosafety committee, taking the severest action possible, said Thursday that Dr. Ian Kennedy, 37, may have intentionally violated the guidelines of the National Institutes of Health.

But the committee pointed out it was also possible the error occurred "due to poor record keeping or lapse of memory."

Kennedy's response to the charge that he may have deliberately violated the federal guidelines, was "very categorically no." But he conceded, "I would probably have come to the same conclusions."

He is free to carry on his other non-cloning research.

Kennedy said he set out late last year to clone the sindbis virus, which is approved for cloning by the NIH. Instead, lab analysis showed Kennedy has used semiki forest virus to do the cloning.

At the time, the material was not approved for cloning. Since then, it has been placed on the approved list.

Kennedy resigned from the biosafety committee last spring when four graduate students in his lab went to biology chairman Donald Helsinki to report the possibility Kennedy may have cloned a prohibited virus.

Mr.& Mrs..And Mr.

Everybody thought that Jimmy York (Kale Browne), an ex-quarterback for the New York Jets, died in a plane crash in the Caribbean. His wife, Jenny Collins (Rebecca Balding), certainly thought she was a widow when after a year she kept her maiden name but married sports writer Jeff Zelinka (Patrick Collins). Shock, confusion and logistic problems ensue when Jimmy returns home very much alive. Now, Jenny has two husbands, each refuting the other's claim on his wife, and both sleeping in the guest room. Jenny tries desperately to sort out the situation but her friend thinks Jenny should keep them both. To be presented 8:30 p.m. Monday, September 1 on Channel 7.

"All right. So they call me a revisionist . . . but after all it's much easier to be a reporter of the past," says Magnus Magnusson, a native of Iceland, who depicts his Nordic forbears as more hooked on trading and poetry (as shown by their sagas) than on raiding and pillaging, in a PBS series, "Viking Age," which he wrote and will narrate, on October 4.

Magnus, a strong-jawed delightful man who is based in Glasgow, Scotland, visits the homeland every few months to keep up on what's new. He wants to spread the word that Iceland, which has the oldest parliament in the world, in June, became the first nation to elect a woman president.

She is Vigdis Finnborgadottir, who is divorced, 50, and one of the first singles to become an adoptive parent — one child, so far, a daughter.

TV Mailbag

Where can I write to the producers of The Hollywood Squares? The David Letterman Show replaced our morning entertainment show, and we feel abused. — A Craycher, Fargo, N.D.

The producers of The Hollywood Squares probably feel abused, too, since it wasn't their idea to get Squares dropped from your local station. Complain to your NBC affiliate about the change. Otherwise send your condolences to Hollywood Squares, Heatter-Quigley/Filmways, 9255 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, CA 90069.

What happened to Donna Douglas, who played Ellie Mae on The Beverly Hillbillies? Has she quit acting? - Darrel Braden, Raleigh, Ill.

Instead of pretending to live in a Beverly Hills mansion, Douglas now makes a very nice living selling the real thing. She went into the real estate business soon after the show was dropped, because she had trouble getting decent parts.

Can you tell us what happened to Kate, Luke's wife on The Real McCoys? One day they were married and the next day he was a bachelor. — Mrs. Frank Hokik, San Angelo, Texas.

You'e watching reruns of a series that ran for five years on ABC, was cancelled, then picked up by CBS in 1962 and finally dropped in 1963. The format was changed and Luke became a widower. Only Richard Crenna and Walter Brennan remained from the original cast. Although the transition was smooth back then, it is possible that the episodes you are watching are not being aired in its original order.
